House Kills President's Co-Op Plan For Housing

Truman Wires Plea For Middle Income Group But Loses on 218-155 Rollcall

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

President Truman suffered a major defeat in his domestic "Fair Deal" policy yesterday when the House by a vote of 218 to 155 killed the "middle income" cooperative section of the omnibus housing bill.

The House later passed the remaining portion of the bill by a vote of 361 to 10.

House defeat of the co-op proposal followed a similar action by the Senate last week.

The roll call vote was taken after a tentative action to kill the proposal by a standing vote of 174 to 122.

The move to strike the "middle income" section from the housing measure was led by Representative Jesse P. Wolcott (R., Mich.), ranking Republican member of the Banking Committee. He was supported by a coalition of Republican and Southern Democrats.

Wire Appeal From Truman

The action was taken despite a personal telegraphic appeal from the President that the measure "will enable many citizens of moderate incomes to acquire homes through their own combined efforts without governmental subsidy."

On the issue of knocking out the cooperative provision which President Truman sought the vote of Representatives of nearby States was:

Maryland: for—Beall (R), Bolton (D), Miller (R) and Sasscer (D). Against—Garmatz (D).

Virginia: for—Abbitt, Burton, Gary, Hardy, Harrison, Smith and Stanley (all Democrats). Against—None.

West Virginia: for—none. Against—Bailey, Burnside, Hedrick, Kee, Ramsay and Staggers (all Democrats).

Two Administration attempts to make the measure more palatable were beaten down.

Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.) offered a proposal to make the interest rate on loans to cooperatives a flat 4 percent instead of the estimated 3 to 3½ percent originally proposed by the Banking Committee. This was defeated 126 to 115.

Cut in Sum Proposed

Patman then moved to cut the original two-billion-dollar program of aid to cooperatives by three-fourths of its size, knocking it down to $500 millions. This was rejected 157 to 130.

Wolcott, who argued the program was "socialistic and a threat

$60 Cop's Quarter Goes for a Drink For $250 Beggar

Baltimore, March 22 (AP).—Patrolman Edward Taylor testified today that Walter Elsliger sauntered up to him at a street corner last night, complained he was broke, and asked for carfare home.

The officer shelled out his last quarter.

A few minutes later, Elsliger was back. He blew his breath in Taylor's face and said:

"That's where your quarter went."

Taylor arrested him for drunkenness.

"After I brought him to the station house," Officer Taylor told Magistrate Frank Schap, "I learned he was a steel worker and makes as much as $250 a week. I make $60."

The magistrate levied a $25 fine and the 50-year-old steel worker went to jail when he couldn't pay.

Miss Bailey Plans Appeal

Presidential Right to Oust Loyalty Suspects Approved

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The President's right to fire any Government employe whose loyalty is suspect was upheld yesterday in a 2-to-1 decision of the United States Court of Appeals.

The case, that of Miss Dorothy Bailey, will be appealed to the Supreme Court. That court already has agreed to hear another case testing constitutionality of the loyalty program set up by President Truman's executive order.

For the majority, Judge E. Barrett Prettyman declared that the President "may remove from Government service any person of whose loyalty he is not completely convinced. He may do so without assigning any reason and without giving the employe any explanatory notice."

Judge James M. Proctor sided with Prettyman. Judge Henry W. Edgerton wrote a sharp dissent in which he concluded that Miss Bailey's dismissal "abridges not only freedom of speech but freedom of thought." He contended she was fired "for thinking prohibited thoughts" and he added:

"A constitution that forbids speech control does not permit thought control."

The 39-year-old Miss Bailey was fired in 1949 from an $8000-a-year job as a training officer in the U. S. Employment Service, Federal Security Agency, after a regional loyalty board found that "reasonable grounds exist for belief that Miss Bailey is disloyal to the Government of the United States."

A panel of the Loyalty Review Board sustained the regional board and the full board refused to review the panel's findings. District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff later ruled the loyalty program

'Top Agent's' File May Pace Loyalty Probe

The decision on whether to make Government loyalty files available to a Senate investigating committee may hinge on action to be taken on the files of a man charged by Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) as being Russia's "top espionage agent" in the United States.

It was learned yesterday that the decision on this case, still undetermined, may provide the pattern with respect to the other people McCarthy has accused of Communist activity or leanings.

After a conference on the matter yesterday with Deputy Undersecretary of State John E. Peurifoy, Senator Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee, said he was making "very rapid progress" toward obtaining the files. He said Peurifoy is willing to hand them over.

But the decision rests with President Truman, and his advisers have conflicting views on the wisdom of letting members of Congress search into Executive Branch files.

If some way can be found to make available to Tydings' subcommittee the files on the alleged "espionage agent," presumably this method can serve for the rest of the cases.

McCarthy has offered to stake his whole case on the charges he made Tuesday, in secret session, before Tydings' subcommittee. He said the man is "connected with the State Department."

Yesterday, Secretary of State Acheson dryly told a questioner at his news conference that if there

Bing said he has in mind for Kaye the comedy role of Frosch, a drunken jailer in Die Fledermaus.

Pilots Die as 2 Jets Collide; Debris Driven Through 6 Walls

Charleston, W. Va., March 22 (AP). Two companion jet planes collided and crashed in overcast hills 20 miles south of Charleston today, carrying the two pilots to instant death.

The planes exploded and burned. One of them crashed into a power line, knocking out electric current for a 10-mile stretch of the Coal River Valley.

Another burst with a deafening roar 150 feet from the home of P. A. Parcell, a coal mine electrician.

Pieces of the plane were hurled through six walls of the house, and portions of one of the bodies were propelled through one of the walls.

Yet none of the four occupants of the dwelling was injured.

The pilots were identified as:

Lieut. Col. Arthur F. Reinhardt, 43, of Huntington, N. Y., day foreman for the Advertisers Engraving Service, Inc., contract engravers for The Washington Post, until he joined the Air Force in 1942. He was executive officer of the Eighty-first Fighter Intercepter Wing at Kirtland Air Force Base, Albuquerque, N. Mex. He won the Distinguished Flying Cross in World War II.

Capt. George Evans, 28, of Laurel, Miss., operations officer of the Ninety-third Fighter Squadron of the Eighty-first Wing.

The two ships made an overnight emergency stop at Kanawha airport in Charleston, while en route from Andrews Air Base, near Washington, to Louisville.

They landed with near-empty fuel tanks after fighting stiff headwinds yesterday, and fuel supplies were ordered overland from Patterson Field, Ohio.

The control tower at Kanawha Airport, where the ships had taken off five minutes before, reported hearing this radio conversation between the fighter

T. E. Murray Is Appointed To AEC Post

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday selected Thomas E. Murray, 58, New York industrialist, engineer and financier, to be a member of the Atomic Energy Commission.

He will fill the membership vacancy left by the resignation on February 15 of former AEC Chairman David E. Lilienthal.

At Key West, Fla., where the announcement was made from the President's winter vacation spot, it was indicated that Murray will not be designated as chairman. Instead, the chairman will be chosen to fill the vacancy created when Lewis E. Strauss leaves his job on the AEC April 15.

Meantime, Commissioner Sumner T. Pike will continue as acting chairman, it appeared.

Was on Mine Welfare Board

Murray was the first neutral chairman of the United Mine Workers welfare fund. UMW president John L. Lewis, and Capt. N. H. Collison, representing the Government, selected him when the mines were still under Federal seizure, in April, 1947.

He stayed on as neutral trustee when the mines passed back to the operators three months later. But in February, 1948, he resigned with a blast at both the union and the operators for stubbornness in failing to agree on a pension scheme.

Non-Military Aid Voted by House Group

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

The Administration's non-military foreign aid programs headed for the House floor yesterday after the Foreign Affairs Committee had approved them in a huge "single-package" bill.

House leaders planned to bring the bill up for debate Friday, in the hope of getting passage before the weekend. But they may change their plans because scores of Democrats from Eastern cities, normally friendly to foreign aid, are often away on Fridays on weekend visits home.

The bill authorized:

1. For the Marshall Plan—$1,950,000,000 for the next fiscal year, plus 150 million of unspent funds carried over from this year, plus up to a billion dollars' worth of surplus farm products;

2. For the Far East—a year's extension of time for spending an estimated $104 millions in unused China funds; of this amount at least $40 millions would be used in non-Communist areas of China (meaning Formosa and Hainan), up to six millions for Chinese students and teachers here, and the remainder in "the general area of China" (meaning Indo-China and elsewhere in southeast Asia);

$27,500,000 for Arab Refugees

3. For Arab refugees—$27,500,000 as the American contribution toward work projects outlined by a United Nations mission;

4. For backward areas—$45 millions for American technical assistance under the so-called Point Four programs, including 10 million for similar programs already under way.

The technical cooperation part of Point Four thus approaches Congressional debate more than 14 months after President Truman proposed the idea in his inaugural address last year. The Senate has not yet considered it, even in committee, but the Foreign Relations Committee may start hearings on it next week. A separate bill, not yet reported to the House, deals with guarantees to private investments under Point Four.

The foreign aid bill as approved yesterday contained three important amendments which are sure to run into trouble in the eventual conference with the Senate.

One of them calls for a billion-dollar swap of surplus food for cash under the Marshall Plan. The committee yesterday beat down an Administration attempt to make this amendment more flexible. Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has already predicted that this scheme would be killed in conference, and ECA Adminis-

Area Yale Men Honor Seymour, Retiring President, at Dinner

More than 500 members of the Yale Club of Washington, the organization's largest gathering, turned out last night to pay respects to Yale's retiring president, Charles Seymour.

Dining at the Mayflower Hotel, the Eli alumni heard from a distinguished group of Washingtonians about the greatness of President Seymour.

Senator Brien McMahon (D., Conn.), Law School class of 1927, joined with Secretary of the Air Force W. Stuart Symington, '23, in praising Dr. Seymour for his stalwart stand on maintaining academic freedom. McMahon declared: "Your insistence on academic freedom is needed now as it has never been needed before."

Symington mingled his praise for Dr. Seymour with some for a fellow Cabinet member and Yale man, Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson, '15. He lauded the Secretary as making a "great step toward peace" in achieving the successful completion of the Atlantic Pact.

Dr. Seymour, in his address, said the New Haven institution has a "sense of pride in the service" of the "beleaguered" Secretary of State and "We are grateful that he is there."

Acheson was seated next to Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) throughout the dinner and in his remarks noted that they, as fellow members of the Yale Corporation, the insitution's governing body, had a long record of agreement on university matters. The Yale men laughed in the knowledge of the frequent disagreements between them on off-campus matters.

The Secretary of State, introducing Dr. Seymour, indicated some envy for the Yale president's impending retirement. Noting that he is now almost 58, he promised "in the presence of witnesses here" that "I shall retire as Secretary of State the day I am 65."

Acheson praised Dr. Seymour for his persevering "dedication to the university" both as provost and as president. "He leaves Yale in sound and good shape," he declared.

This view was echoed by Dr. Seymour, who reported Yale strong in a university's three most important qualities—its faculty, student body and its library. He said they were among the best in the country.

Senator Taft gave evidence of his loyalty to his alma mater in describing two attempts — both unsuccessful — to get a commemorative postage stamp issued for Yale. His first was on the occasion of the 300th anniversary of the birth of Elihu Yale and then on the 250th anniversary of the founding of Yale.

The Postoffice Department rejected both subjects for stamps on the grounds that such institutions "have anniversaries too frequently," but he charged, had issued one on the 50th anniversary of the founding of poultry clubs.

The Senator termed Dr. Seymour "a great president" who had rendered "extraordinary services" to Yale. Associate Justice Stanley F. Reed, '06, expressed himself similarly.

Toastmaster was John S. Cooper, '23, former Republican Senator from Kentucky and now United States delegate to the United Nations General Assembly.

E. Capitol St. Bridge Approved Unanimously by House Group

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A House District subcommittee yesterday unanimously approved a bill to carry out the District Commissioners' plan to bridge the Anacostia River at East Capitol st.

The decision, overriding protests of park and planning officials, was made in an executive afternoon session of the subcommittee and announced by Chairman James C. Davis (D., Ga.)

Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.), author of the bill and a member of the subcommittee, said one of the major reasons for the decision was the support given the Commissioners' plan by Federal and Maryland road engineers.

The bill was also indorsed by Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.), whose Congressional district includes Prince Georges County.

Officials of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, with the active support of their former chairman, Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant, 3d, have opposed the East Capitol st. bridge and favored one at Massachusetts ave. se. They have been backed up by Federal parks officials, and others.

Beall said he believed the support given the East Capitol st. bridge bill by Thomas H. MacDonald, U. S. Public Roads Commission, played an important part in

Marshall Hgts. Project to Be Terminated

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

For a change, private, public and District Government housing officials found themselves of one mind yesterday on one big local slum clearance issue.

Checks with spokesmen of the various groups revealed a unanimous feeling that it is high time the District throws in the towel on the idea of redeveloping Marshall Heights in Southeast Washington—at least in the near future.

Instead, "serious and immediate" study should be directed to selecting a downtown alley slum area for the city's first full-scale slum clearance project, officials agreed.

Cue for the let's-forget-Marshall Heights thinking came from the House Appropriations Committee Tuesday when it, in effect, demanded revocation of the Marshall Heights "freeze" on property improvements.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission will vote on rescinding the "freeze" order at its April meeting. Under the District slum clearance act, this action would be tantamount to abandoning the project.

Edward R. Carr, past president of the National Home Builders' Association, said the planning commission "would be foolish" if it does not revoke the Marshall Heights construction "freeze."

"It's high time we start giving serious consideration to another site for slum clearance work—and

Labor Body Fights Tariff Cuts Held to Threaten Jobs in U. S.

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The Administration's move to lower tariffs so as to stimulate international trade and help out the Marshall Plan nations is running into the growing opposition of labor groups.

Yesterday, the newly formed National Labor-Management Council on Foreign Trade Policy issued a demand for "reasonable safeguards against unfair and deflationary foreign competition."

The council, while numerically small, nonetheless includes 15 international and national affiliates of the American Federation of Labor, which has been and is a champion of the Marshall Plan.

O. R. Strackbein, chairman of the council, said yesterday that his group is most definitely not against the Marshall Plan, but that the council opposes new assistance to the Marshall Plan countries in the form of "unreasonably" low tariffs.

"Our attitude," said Strackbein, "is that the Marshall Plan is something which benefits the entire Nation, so that all the people should pay to support it. But by lowering tariffs on certain goods, the Administration would be placing an added burden on certain American industries and throw their employes out of work."

Strackbein pointed out that as long ago as the fall of 1948, at its annual convention in Cincinnati, the AFL indorsed the Administration's reciprocal trade treaty program, but at the same time opposed further duty reduction in such cases where the jobs of its members would be endangered by competing imported goods.

Management and labor groups supporting the protectionist council are from the following industries: book manufacturing, fishing, fish canning, glass containers,

Jury Convicts Ex-Police Officer on Two Counts

Wife Sobs as Panel Returns Verdict in Rape, Robbery Intent Of Arlington Couple

By William H. Smith and Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporters

Francis E. Dodson was convicted of housebreaking with intent to commit rape and robbery by an Arlington County jury last night.

The 12-man jury, after nearly four hours of deliberation, found the former Arlington County policeman guilty on both counts as charged and fixed his sentence at 12 years in prison.

Dodson, 31, who terrorized an Arlington couple at gunpoint in their home last September, could have received a death sentence on either charge under Virginia law. The law also provides imprisonment from 5 to 18 years on either charge.

In his summation, Commonwealth's Attorney Denman T. Rucker did not ask for the death penalty.

"It's up to you decide if 18 years is enough," he told the jury.

Dodson was accused of forcing his way at gunpoint into the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Jack Bartels, at 2810-B S. 16th rd., Arlington, early on the morning of last September 29.

The couple testified during the three-day trial that Dodson forced them to disrobe and locked Bartels in a bedroom closet while he performed an unnatural sex act on Mrs. Bartels and tried to force her to commit the same act.

Throughout the trial, defense counsel had made no attempt to deny or disprove any of the allegations.

The defense contended only that Dodson was there by reason of temporary insanity and that this temporary insanity was an outgrowth of his war ordeals.

Wife Sobs at Verdict

When the verdict was announced, Dodson's wife, Elizabeth, who was in a front row seat, almost directly behind her husband, broke into loud sobs. Judge Earle Abbott rapped sharply for order.

Dodson's father, Detective Sergt. Frank Dodson of the Metropolitan police department, was also in the courtroom. He wept quietly.

Dodson appeared unmoved. When Judge Abbott asked him if he wished to make any comment, he muttered no, he didn't guess so.

Judge Abbott quickly denied defense motions that the verdict be

West Denies Drug Theft Probe Block

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Dr. Charles C. West, Gallinger Hospital chief pharmacist, denied on the witness stand yesterday that he tried to prevent police from probing an alleged theft of "miracle" drugs at the hospital.

The implied charge leading to the denial was made by the Government prosecutor in the District Court trial of James W. Kinard, 35, of 1654 Rosedale st. ne. Kinard, a pharmacist's aide at the hospital, is accused of stealing 500 vials of dihydrostreptomycin and three vials of chloromycetin. The chloromycetin, police said, was found on his person. The streptomycin was sold, the Government charges, to a physician.

Meanwhile, before Judge T. Alan Goldsborough and a jury was being unfolded testimony of "lost" letters, "missing" requisitions, and a general storeroom that was formally inventoried but once in more than a year.

Chester Skarr, assistant property officer at the hospital, said that according to his records he could not account for more than 4000 vials of streptomycin there.

But, according to a statement given a reporter by Supt. Philip A. Stebbing, he knows of no missing drugs.

But admittedly Kinard is still employed at the hospital. He reportedly has a record of joyriding,

Subversive Listing On IWO Held Legal

Cosmic Ray Trip

U. S. Refuses Passport to Navy Scientist

DR. BERNARD PETERS
India trip barred

Rochester, N. Y., March 22 (AP).—The University of Rochester said today the United States State Department has refused a passport to Dr. Bernard Peters, 39, research physicist, for a trip to India to study cosmic rays.

University officials said the State Department gave no reason.

The studies were to have been sponsored and financed by the United States Office of Naval Research.

In Washington, Mrs. Ruth Shipley, chief of the State Department's passport division, said the passport was denied because Dr. Peters' proposed trip was deemed "contrary to the best interests of the United States."

[The Atomic Energy Commission disclosed that Peters was employed at the Radiation Laboratory, in Berkeley, Calif., from Jan. 1, 1942, until July 31, 1946. This was during the days when the American atomic project was under the direction of the Army's Manhattan Engineer District.

[The AEC declined to give any further data or comment on the matter, in accordance with its standing policy.—Editor's note.]

Peters, a German-educated native of Poland, came to this country in 1934 and became a citizen in 1940. He first located at the University of California. He shifted to the University of Rochester in 1946.

In 1948, while en route to England to attend a scientific meeting as a representative of the Office of Naval Research, he was questioned in France by navy security officers, who took away his Navy credentials. The credentials later were returned by the American Embassy in Paris.

Upon his return to the United States, he was questioned by the House Un-American Activities Committee at a closed hearing. Records of the hearing never were made public.

Bandit Toll Is 226

London, March 22 (AP).—Malayan bandits killed 226 persons and wounded 196 in the three months ending March 3, Colonial Secretary James Griffiths told Commons today.

The United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday that the Government acted legally when it placed the International Workers Order, Inc., on the "subversive" list.

In a split decision, the court said that the IWO lacked the power to sue since it was not hurt as the "direct" result of the subversive designation incident to the loyalty investigation.

Judge Wilbur K. Miller with Judge James M. Proctor concurring said:

"When the Attorney General designated IWO as a subversive organization for the purposes of the Executive Order, he did no more than to advise the executive department in that respect, as he had been directed to do. If he was mistaken as to the true character of IWO, no court can cause him to change his conclusion. The correctness of administrative advice cannot be reviewed by the courts."

Lacks An Interest

Judge Miller then said that the administrative procedures concerned with the loyalty investigation "directly affect nobody except Government employes and applicants for Government positions. Any injury suffered by IWO because of the Attorney General's subversive designation is an incidental result of the loyalty investigation. Not being directly affected thereby, it lacks the interest which it must have in order to maintain this action."

IWO pointed out that it is a "fraternal organization issuing policies of insurance to its members." It said that the subversive listing had lost for it certain tax exemption, that it has suffered investigation by State insurance departments, and that many members have resigned and others have been subjected to charges of disloyalty or dismissed from employment.

The majority opinion advised IWO to seek relief from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue or from the States.

Edgerton Dissents

In a dissent, Judge Henry W. Edgerton said that since the IWO charged in its suit that it had suffered "grave and irreparable financial injury" caused by the designation, it should have the right to maintain the suit.

The court also split on whether Arthur Lowndes Drayton, a Post Office employe could intervene in the case. He carried life insurance and other benefits in IWO and said that the Loyalty Board of the Post Office had instituted proceedings to dismiss him because of his membership in IWO.

Like IWO, Drayton asked that the Loyalty Program be held unconstitutional and that the IWO be removed from the subversive list. He also asked for an injunction to prevent the Government from causing him to be dismissed.

The university head made his statement to the university's campus publication.

Court Upholds Right of President to Fire Loyalty Suspects in Bailey Case Appeal

constitutional and Miss Bailey appealed.

The court majority yesterday took one exception to the loyalty findings. It threw out as unconstitutional the regional board's ruling that Miss Bailey, who lives with her parents at 4936 Butterworth ave. nw., be barred from competing in civil service exams for three years.

The split in the Appeals Court yesterday revolved chiefly around the primacy of the public interest over that of the individual citizen.

The majority took the position that the court must look not only at Miss Bailey's side but at the public side of the controversy. Judge Prettyman then said:

"From that point of view, the retention in the Government service of one suspected of theft or a similar offense would not be of great importance and the revelation of the method of detection and the names of informants would not affect the public interest.

"But disloyalty in the Government service under present circumstances is a matter of great public concern, and revelation of the methods of detecting it and of the names of witnesses involve public considerations of compelling importance."

The judge was referring to the fact that Miss Bailey was not told who furnished to the FBI the damning reports against her and was not permitted to confront or cross-examine her accusers. Prettyman then continued:

"We cannot ignore the world situation in which not merely two ideologies but two potentially adverse forces presently exist, and certainly we cannot require that the President and the Congress ignore it. Infiltration of Government service is now a recognized technique for the overthrow of government.

"We do not think that the individual rights guaranteed by the Constitution necessarily mean that a government dedicated to those rights cannot preserve itself in the world as it is. This case presents a small segment of that momentous question."

Thus the majority concluded that it is up to the President to determine the caution necessary in relation to Communists in the Government.

"If he thinks," the majority ruled, "that under present circumstances only those whose loyalty is beyond suspicion should be employed by this Government, the policy is his to make. The responsibility in this field is his, and the power to meet it must also be his. The judiciary cannot dictate that he must either retain in Government service those whom he reasonably suspects or else reveal publicly the means and methods by which he detects disloyalty."

The majority noted that a person "may be publicly stigmatized and ruined" by speeches on the floor of Congress where the speaker is cloaked with constitutional immunity. Such harsh rules, said the court, runs "counter to every known precept of fairness" to the individual but "have always been held necessary as a matter of public policy, public interest and the unimpeded performance of the public business."

Hence, the majority felt, the "forum" for such pleas as had been made in Miss Bailey's behalf (against the stigma of "disloyal") is "the Congress and the President's office" rather than the courts.

Judge Edgerton declared, on the other hand, that "a finding of disloyalty is closely akin to a finding of treason. The public hardly distinguishes between the two."

Edgerton said that "without trial by jury, without evidence and without even being allowed to confront her accusers or to know their identity, a citizen of the United States has been found disloyal to the Government of the United States."

The Washington Post
DOROTHY BAILEY
Her case will be appealed

He pointed out that Miss Bailey had denied under oath any membership in or relationship or sympathy to the Communist Party and had produced numerous character witnesses. Against this, said Edgerton, "there were only the unsworn reports in the secret files to the effect that unsworn statements of a general sort, purporting to connect (her) with communism," and they were made "by unnamed persons."

Edgerton noted a Supreme Court ruling that upheld regulation of Government workers designed to prevent interference with the efficiency of the public service. But he said "it is doubtful whether any political opinion of hers, however obnoxious, could reasonably be deemed to interfere with the efficiency of the service."

Edgerton said that some loyalty boards no doubt "are quite aware that unconventional views and conduct have no tendency to indicate disloyalty. But the fact remains that some boards imagine the contrary. This fact is only too well known. It puts Government employes under economic and social pressure to protect their jobs and reputations by expressing in words and conduct only the most orthodox opinions on political, economic and scial questions.'

Edgerton concluded that while the majority felt Miss Bailey's interest and the public interest conflict, he felt "they coincide." He said there was no record of sufficient reason to doubt her patriotism and he added that "even if her services were on the whole desirable, to oust her as disloyal on rumor and without trial is to pay too much for protection against such harm as she could do in such a job." His opinion concluded in these words:

"The cost is too great in morale and efficiency of Government workers, in appeal of Government employment to independent and inquiring minds, and in public confidence in democracy. But even if such dismissals strengthened the Government instead of weakening it, they would still cost too much in Constitutional rights.

"We cannot preserve our liberties by sacrificing them."

The majority opinion, of 23 pages, examined at length the status of Government employes.

It said that "never in our history . . . has a Government employee been entitled as of right to the sort of hearing Miss Bailey demands in respect to dismissal from office." She had demanded the names of those who informed against her and of the method by which her alleged activities were detected.

The question, the majority held, "is not whether she had a trial" but "whether she should have had one."

The majority held that the requirement of the Constitution that in criminal trials the accused shall be confronted by the witnesses against him refers to part of the judicial process. But it held that the division of powers into executive, legislative and judicial does not forbid the President to fire an employe without the sanction of the judicial branch, that is, only after a court trial.

As to the Constitutional provisions against depriving anyone "of life, liberty or property without due process of law," the majority held that loss of a Government job falls into none of these categories. The court held that "due process of law is not applicable unless one is being deprived of something to which one has a right" and Government employment in itself is "not a right."

On the question of whether a loyalty dismissal violates the rights of free speech and assembly, the Court said that "the plain hard fact is that so far as the Constitution is concerned there is no prohibition against the dismissal of Government employes because of their political beliefs, activities or affiliations."

Prettyman pointed out that "every President" since John Adams had fired employes for "purely political reasons" and that Washington had written he would have none of those who were against his policies.

"The first amendment guarantees free speech and assembly," Prettyman declared, "but it does not guarantee Government employ." He added the thought that "there is respectable doubt whether a solidified Government service impervious to the popular will is in the long run anualloyed benefit."

Pass Anti-Red Bill, Senate Group Urges

By the United Press

The Senate Judiciary Committee appealed yesterday for prompt passage of the Mundt-Ferguson Communist-control bill and said it may provide a pattern for other democratic countries threatened by Red fifth columns.

In a report explaining the bill, which it recently approved, the committee said Congress will be "myopic" if it tries to "resist Communist aggression abroad and ignores its clear and present danger at home."

The bill would require Communists and leaders of Communist-front organizations to register with the Justice Department; ban them from Government jobs and secret information, and provide stiff fines and jail terms for anyone "conspiring" to establish a Communist dictatorship.

"If Communists in the United States operated in the open, without foreign direction and without attempting to set up a dicatorship subservient to a foreign power," the committee said, "legislation directed against them would neither be justified nor necessary. This, however, is not the case."

The Veterans of Foreign Wars told the House Un-American Activities Committee, meanwhile, that the Communist Party of the United States should be outlawed on grounds it is a conspiracy against the Government.

'Smear' of McCarthy Denounced

Representative Thomas H. Werdel (R., Calif.) took the floor in the House yesterday to denounce Clifford J. Durr for what he termed a "smear" of Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.).

Werdel said Durr, a former member of the Federal Communications Commission and now president of the National Lawyers Guild, had written a letter to The Washington Post "attacking Senator McCarthy's attempt to clean up the State Department."

"This letter," declared Werdel, "is typical of the organized smear of Senator McCarthy that is now going on throughout the country."

He charged that the National Lawyers Guild which Durr heads is a "Communist front" and that Durr "has found time for many other activities in behalf of communism."

was a Russian spy agent in the department, he didn't know him.

Peurifoy flatly denied that the suspect McCarthy named to the subcommittee works in the Department. He added that "he has never been an employe of the State Department."

The individual has not been named publicly, but his identify is common knowledge to the newsmen who have been reporting on McCarthy's charges.

At his news conference, Acheson supported a contention made earlier in the week by Ambassador-at-Large Philip C. Jessup that McCarthy's charges were injuring the conduct of American policy.

Acheson said Jessup made a full, true and correct statement on that matter when he testified before the Tydings' subcommittee. But, said Acheson, he saw no point in repeating or enlarging on Jessup's statement, lest that create the impression that the Department was opposed to an investigation. Actually, Acheson said, the State Department welcomed the investigation.

On Capitol Hill, Senator Benton (D., Conn.), struck back at critics of Acheson in a maiden speech proposing a world-wide "campaign of ideas" to combat Russian propaganda.

Benton, who served as Assistant Secretary of State from 1945 to 1947, said this country cannot expect bold and imaginative planing in the cold war with Russia "so long as the State Department is forced to cower like a tormented turtle."

The Connecticut legislator said former Secretaries of State James F. Byrnes and Gen. George C. Marshall both had to suffer through the "occupational hazard" of criticism, and he declared:

"Now it is Dean Acheson, in spite of the great reforms he has achieved in the department and the loyal and able key subordinates he is developing."

The way to remedy the department's problems, Benton said, is not by "harrying and tormenting Dean Acheson until he quits his great post."

Nixon Seeks Inquiry By 'Impartial' Group

An "impartial, nonpolitical commission" to investigate Senator McCarthy's charges of Communism in the State Department was proposed last night by Representative Robert M. Nixon, top-ranking Republican on the House un-American Activities Committee.

Nixon said the present inquiry by a Senate investigating committee is "rapidly degenerating into a political squabble."

Representative Nixon, who was a key figure in breaking the Alger Hiss-Whittaker Chambers case last year, said that the Nation's security requires "an honest, impartial and vigorous" investigation of McCarthy's accusations.

Concerning the present Senate investigation, Nixon said:

"Too much attention is being paid to the effect the investigation will have on an election and not enough attention to getting the facts, regardless of whom they may hurt."

Italy Arrests 7000 In 12-Hour Strike

By Bonn Regime

All-German Free Election Is Requested

Bonn, March 22 (AP)—The West German government today declared itself in favor of free all-German elections—but passed to the Western Allies the responsibility for winning Soviet agreement.

The Russians are not even permitting the elections scheduled in their own zone for October 15 to be free.

The idea of a free election throughout East and West Germany was suggested by U. S. High Commissioner John J. McCloy, recently. It won the support of Sir Brian Robertson, British High Commissioner, but the two officials said the West German government should take the initiative.

In a statement today, the West German Government passed the initiative right back, declaring the conditions for a free election must be guaranteed by a four-power electoral law.

Any four-power agreement on all-German elections would heal one of the biggest breaches between East and West. At the Paris Foreign Ministers Conference last year the political unification of Germany was discussed at length. No one got to first base.

The election proposed by McCloy would choose a Constituent Assembly which would write a constitution for the whole country.

The Soviet attitude on German elections was indicated today when the political committee of the Christian Democratic Union, largest non-Communist party in eastern Germany, bowed to pressure and agreed to participate in picking a "national front" list of candidates in elections October 15. Liberal Democrats, the only other non-Communist party, already have indicated they will agree. That means there will be but one slate of candidates—heavily padded with representatives of Communist youth, women's, farmers' and trade union organizations.

Russians Again Curb Berlin Truck Traffic

Berlin, March 22 (U.P.).—The Russians slowed western truck traffic in and out of Berlin to half the normal rate today, and German vehicles were lined up waiting on both sides of the zonal border checkpoint at Helmstedt.

West German police reported 50 west-bound trucks and 25 others headed for Berlin were awaiting clearance by Russian soldiers. They said the Russians were allowing between six and 10 trucks through in each direction hourly, compared with the normal average of 15.

The British High Commission's official newspaper, Die Welt, reported that the East German Ministry of Interior had ordered an intensified control of all persons and traffic entering the Soviet zone from West Germany and western Europe.

Rome, March 22 (U.P.).—One man was killed, some 400 were injured and more than 7000 were arrested today during the Communists' 12-hour nation-wide general strike.

The strike ended at 6 p. m. (noon EST) in most areas. But tonight Communist labor boss Giuseppe di Vittorio announced it would continue at Parma, near Milan, where a striker met death, until 6 p. m. Thursday.

In Rome a hand grenade exploded late tonight, injuring an unidentified person in a street and shattering window panes of several buildings.

Premier Alcide de Gasperi called today's demonstration a total failure. At 6 p. m. he reported the situation throughout the country was calm.

One government spokesman said the strike was only 40 percent effective.

The government massed its entire police force, 75,000 carabinieri (federal police) and 69,000 civil police, and banned all public rallies. Bystanders were arrested on slightest suspicion and hauled off to headquarters in trucks.

At Savona, near Genoa, 60 workers and police were injured when the strikers tried to rally in the central square. The workers stoned police, who fired into the air, then hurled tear gas bombs and waded in with night sticks.

Police said "at least 100" were injured during scuffles in Rome. Police also resorted to firing in the air here when a mob advanced on the Italian Foreign Office during the noon hour. Riot squads drove their jeeps into the crowd, scattering it. They also turned fire hoses on demonstrators.

Strikers stoned streetcars, strewed nails on streets, overturned some police jeeps and beat up a number of office workers and shop clerks who refused to quit work.

Forty-two persons were arrested at Abbiate Grasso, outside Milan, for helping a Communist escape after an attempt to halt a train.

The 7000 arrested were picked up in Rome, Milan, Turin, Florence and other major cities for attempting to defy the government's ban on public rallies. Police said 2000 were seized in Rome alone. All those arrested were released with warnings.

Blindfold Checker Champ Plays 20 Games Simultaneously Here At 'Y'—Wins 17, Ties 3

The Washington Post

CHAMP'S PLAY—Newell Banks (seated, left), world checker champion, turns his back to the boards and gives directions from memory to "Caller" George Vidlak. His three opponents are (from left) H. Ackerman, J. M. Rutherford and A. J. Banks

Playing 20 games of checkers simultaneously while blindfolded is easy for Newell Williams Banks, of Detroit, Mich., blindfold checker champion of the world.

"In fact, I could probably play 32 games simultaneously," said Banks, who appeared under the auspices of the District of Columbia Checker Association last night at the YMCA. "But 20 is the most I've ever played. I won 17 of the games, three were draws.

"Playing time was 2 hours, 25 minutes. The former record time was about 7½ hours. It is speed and accuracy that count in blindfold, not the fact that you can actually play that way."

Banks, who is 62 years old, began playing checkers when he was 5. His father was one of Michigan's leading players, and could also play blindfolded. The son began to play blindfolded when about 5½ years old.

He not only can play a score of blindfold games simultaneously, but he can keep checker and chess games going simultaneously, and years ago would play checker games while shooting pool.

At the Chicago World's Fair of 1933 he played 140 games (not blindfolded) simultaneously. Total playing time was 145 minutes. He won 133 games; seven were draws.

"You can tell a person how to play blindfold checkers," said Banks, "but if he can't do it in three or four days, he never can."

Venizelos Tries to Form Greek Cabinet

Athens, March 23 (AP).—Sophocles Venizelos, Liberal leader whose party ran a close third in the elections March 5, said tonight he was continuing efforts to form a government under his premiership.

George Papandreou, Social Democrat leader, said earlier he understood Venizelos would return the mandate to form a government that was handed him by King Paul.

Earlier, Constantin Tsaldaris, chief of the Populist Party, which ran first, had given up the mandate because he was unable to command parliamentary support from other parties.

It was expected the King would next commission Gen. Nicholas Plastiras, leader of the Progressive Union, which surprised all political observers by running second.

Plastiras, Venizelos and Papandreau announced several days ago they had agreed to form a center coalition government with Plastiras as premier.

That projected coalition seemed about to collapse for a time today when Papandreou accused Venizelos of an "astounding doublecross" by negotiating secretly with Tsaldaris.

At a meeting of the three leaders, Papandreou told reporters, Venizelos made two propositions. One was that Venizelos would head the coalition. The other was that he would head an all-Liberal government. Both were rejected by the other two party leaders.

81-Year-Old Leopold Backer Seeks to End Belgian Crisis

Brussels, March 22 (NYHT).—The task of solving Belgium's constitutional crisis was turned over today to an uncompromising supporter of Leopold III, 81-year-old Count Henry Carton de Wiart.

The appointment of Carton de Wiart, a member of the right wing of the Christian Social Party, is certain to infuriate the Socialist and Liberal parties, who oppose the return of the exiled king.

Acting Prime Minister Gaston Eyskens, a moderate Social Christian, confessed today his inability to form a government based on a coalition of the Liberals and the Social Christians. He suggested to Prince Regent Charles that he appoint Carton de Wiart.

Belgium's internal situation is considered so grave that an extraordinary meeting of the kingdom's 28 Ministers of State is being called at the royal palace Thursday.

This is the first session since 1914 of the Ministers of State, who were appointed by royal decree as an advisory assembly. It is made up of distinguished political leaders and includes seven former Prime Ministers.

French-German Union Idea Is Turned Down in Paris

Paris, March 22 (AP).—France favors a good neighbor policy with Germany but wants no bilateral union, a government spokesman said today.

The French government is convinced that "a durable normalization of Franco-German relations must take place within the collective organization of Europe," Minister of State Pierre Henri Teitgen said.

This, he said after a cabinet meeting, is France's reply to recent suggestions by West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer for a Franco-German union.

Foreign Minister Robert Schuman brought up the subject at the cabinet meeting.

Teitgen said France is not only cool to any narrow political agreements with Germany, but believes any economic agreements should take place within a larger framework. He presumably referred to both the Council of Europe—of which Germany is not a member—and the Marshall Plan organizations.

With these reservations Teitgen added, France "is ready to consider all concrete suggestions made to her by the German government."

Britain Orders New Jet Fighter

London, March 22 (AP).—Britain has placed orders for the production of a new type of jet fighter—the Venom—air Secretary Arthur Henderson told Commons today.

It's performance will exceed that of the British Vampire on all counts, he said.

The Air Secretary also told Commons:

Some valuable work is being done on an advanced air-to-air guided missile aimed at stepping up the effectiveness of fighters against modern bombers.

Squadrons equipped with new Canberra twin-jet bomber should be in service next year.

pressed and blow glassware, glove manufacture, fur, felt and wool hats, kaolin, matches, photo-engraving, pottery, scientific apparatus makers, wall paper, aluminum, hot house vegetables.

Among the sponsors of the council are Matthew Woll, president of the International Photo-Engravers Union and a vice president of the AFL. Woll is also chairman of America's Wage Earners Protective Conference, a trade union organization which before the war was active in fighting for what it calls "reasonable"—and what its opponents call "high" — tariffs. Strackbein is executive secretary of the conference as well as chairman of the council.

Another national labor figure, Keen Johnson, former Undersecretary of Labor, was elected to the 16-man executive board of the council during its executive sessions this past week.

The council, created last January, is concerned with the increasing pressure on the part of the Administration to lower the tariffs and thereby give the Marshall Plan countries a better opportunity to obtain American dollars.

Presently, under orders of the White House, the Administration agencies are seeking to encourage European sales in this country. Many of the Marshall Plan countries are making plans for trade drives here with the help of the United States Government. As part of this effort, the Treasury has prepared a bill to be submitted to Congress, which would reduce the red tape in American customs procedures.

Labor, the publication of the Railroad Brotherhoods, has attacked the proposed Point Four program as "the old economic imperialism from which the world is trying to escape."

Nonmilitary Aid Plan Voted

trator Paul Hoffman thinks it would put him in a "straitjacket."

Another House committee amendment revives a scheme for investment guarantees which the Senate committee killed in conference last year.

It not only assures private investors of getting their earnings or profits out of Europe in dollars; it also guarantees them against any losses due to "seizure, confiscation or destruction by any government; destruction by revolution or war;" or due to European laws or decrees which make it impossible to do business. The total of private investments covered by such guarantees is limited to 300 million dollars.

The third and last of the important amendments would put Congress on record is favoring a regional organization to be set up by "the free countries and the free peoples of the Far East."

It says the purpose of such an organization would be "to establish a program of self-help and mutual cooperation designed to develop their economic and social well-being, to safeguard basic rights and liberties and to protect their security and independence."

The State Department frowns on such an organization because, it believes, the Asian peoples do not want it and are not ready for it. The only Asiatic leader of consequence who has favored it is President Quirino of the Philippines; others, including Prime Minister Nehru of India, have actively opposed it.

Dr. Millikan Voices Doubt About H-Bomb

Pasadena, Calif., March 22 (AP).—Dr. Robert A. Millikan, Nobel prize winning scientist, says he is not at all certain that man can make a hydrogen bomb.

He is frankly skeptical that any man-made device will ever split the earth asunder.

But it is true, he says, "that we and our possible adversary now possess the instruments to destroy each other."

82 Years Old

Millikan was 82 today. In an interview commemorating the occasion, the man who first isolated and measured the electron and opened the way for preesnt-day atomic research observed:

"With all the talk about the hydrogen bomb, I'm not yet convinced that it's at all certain we can build such a bomb. Of course, if it were possible to make the hydrogen in all the seas combine at once into helium, we probably could explode the whole earth and transform it into a nebula.

"However, I'm still skeptical. I think it would take a warmer lady than mother earth to make such a horror possible."

Millikan is known as the "billion-volt sparkplug" of the California Institute of Technology. Although he "retired" as chairman of the school's executive council in 1945, he still maintains a fast working pace.

Only three years ago he traveled several thousand miles by truck on a cosmic ray expedition that started in Texas and wound up in Canada. His only complaint was that he couldn't "get the kids away early enough." The "kids" were professors half his age.

Regular Office Hours

Millikan maintains regular office hours and makes flying trips over the country to keep speaking engagements. Since retiring he has completed his soon-to-be-published autobiography and kept up with his duties as vice president of the Caltech board of trustees.

With the wisdom of a man who has watched his country recover from a civil war (he was born in 1688) and grow into the strongest nation in the world, Millikan observes:

"We may be lost if we fail to maintain the American way of life against Socialist trends which threaten our personal freedom.

"We must make it very plain to Russia that we will go ahead without her if she won't join with us in this ideal. Above all, we must be too strong to be attacked, pacifists to the contrary."

Most of Millikan's scientific achievements are too technical for the layman to comprehend. But it takes no special knowledge to understand that the multi-million-dollar, world-renowned institution that is Caltech is largely a monument to the non-academic efforts of this atomic scientist.

Murray Made AEC Member

THOMAS E. MURRAY
Named to AEC post

Murray became an inventor, with more than 200 patents to his credit. He headed his own manufacturing company, and is on the board of several banking and industrial concerns.

Has 11 Children

For eight years he was the sole receiver of the Interborough Rapid Transit Co., largest of the New York City subway companies before they were consolidated.

He is a prominent Catholic layman, a Knight of St. Gregory and a Knight of Malta. He has 11 children.

Meantime, the White House steered clear of confirming or denying rumors of other impending shifts in the Government. To published rumors that W. Stuart Symington might leave his Air Force post to become chairman of the National Security Resources Board, Presidential Secretary Charles Ross declined comment.

He also was noncommittal on reports that Gen. Lucius Clay might get the AEC chairmanship, or that W. Averell Harriman, roving ECA ambassador, might be named "Secretary to the Cabinet." Ross did say, however, that the Harriman report was new to him.

German Merchant Ship Docks in Baltimore

Baltimore, March 22 (AP).—The 8500-ton freighter Hermod slipped into a Baltimore dock early today, the first Germant merchant ship to put in since the war.

The Hermod made the story Atlantic passage from Emden in water ballast. It will load about 2500 tons of grain here and will return to Germany.

Jet Fighters Are Shifted to Northwest

By The Associated Press

Jet-fighter defenses in the Pacific Northwest were ordered strengthened yesterday in a move to protect key defense installations including the Hanford, Wash., atomic works.

Ordering additional fast jets shuttled in from New Mexico, the Air Force announced:

"This transfer is designed to make the best use of available fighter squadrons in the organization of a modern air defense across the Pacific Northwest approaches."

The Army already has announced that antiaircraft units will be deployed in the country around Hanford in the next 10 days.

Headquarters of the 81st Fighter-Interceptor Wing, and two of its fighter squadrons, now stationed at Kirtland Air Force Base at Albuquerque, N. M., are being shifted to the base at Moses Lake, Wash. The planes are North American F-86 Sabre jet fighters.

The transfer involves about 1200 persons. One squadron of the eighty-first stays at Kirtland, which is headquarters of the Special Weapons Command.

Further bolstering the northwest air shield, the Air Force said that squadrons of the 325th All-weather fighter wing that already are stationed in the Pacific northwest will be equipped late this summer with radar-carrying Lockheed F-94 jet fighters. Those squadrons now have piston-engine planes.

Headquarters of the 325th, now at Moses Lake, will be moved to McChord Air Force Base at Tacoma, along with one of two squadrons now stationed at Moses Lake. One squadron of the wing already is stationed at McChord.

Headquarters and two of the three squadrons of the sixty-second troop carrier command, now at McChord, will be shifted to Kelly base at San Antonio, Tex. The third squadron stays at McChord.

Acheson Cool To Lie's Plan On 'Cold War'

Secretary Acheson was polite but noncommittal yesterday about the latest proposal of Secretary-General Trygve Lie of the United Nations to ease the cold war.

Lie said in a speech here Tuesday night that the Charter of the U. N. provided for periodic meetings of the Security Council with high-level ministers in attendance. So far, said Lie, such a meeting has never been held.

Acheson told his press conference that any suggestion coming from Lie would, of course, have the most careful and respectful consideration by the United States Government. He remarked, though, that any such special meeting of the Security Council would need the general consent of the members to be effective.

This was an indirect reminder that the Soviet Union had boycotted the Security Council because of the continued membership of Nationalist China. Officials here are sure the Russians would refuse to attend a special meeting unless the Chinese Communists were seated instead.

Lie's proposal thus seemed unlikely to get anywhere until the question of Chinese representation is settled—and perhaps not even then. Acheson has announced already that the United States would fight the Chinese Communists' membership, but would abide by a majority decision to seat them.

Acheson said yesterday he had not received any request from Lie for an interview, and he did not, apparently, ask the Secretary-General to come to see him. Lie did, however, have a talk at the State Department with Deputy Undersecretary Dean Rusk, Assistant Secretary John D. Hickerson and Ambassador Philip C. Jessup.

Queen Mary's Rug Exhibited in N. Y.; To Tour 16 Cities

New York, March 22 (AP).—A rug made by Queen Mary of England and donated by her for sale to help replenish her country's meager dollar supply was given a formal showing here today.

The rug, which took the Queen Mother eight years to make, contains a million stitches and more than 500 colors of thread.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who was among the guests at headquarters of the English Speaking Union, said the floral carpet was an example of the British people's determination to better their economic position.

The rug now goes on exhibition at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. During a tour of 16 cities in the United States and six in Canada, sealed bids will be accepted for the Queen's handicraft.

Senior High Students Study A-Bomb Structure and Future

The Atomic Energy Commission had better really batten down the hatches on A-bomb info.

The District's 13,000 senior high school students are out to learn the secret of the bomb.

And from the way they toss around phrases like alpha and beta rays, plutonium, electrons, isotopes, curium and nucear energy—and even Einstein's theory—they must be well on the way.

The study of atomic energy is by student demand, according to Keith C. Johnson, science department head for white schools. He puts the blame on "you newspaper people."

The interest aroused has led to a "pretty thorough study. For their age level—16 and 17—they have made really phenomenal progress—and it's making them better students," Johnson said.

In classes now, studies have been started on atomic structure and how an atomic bomb is created.

At Anacostia High School, the science students have perfected a simulated atomic blast using a formula of powdered zinc and sulphur exploded by an electric spark. The experiment costs less than a dime, but leaves a dramatic memory of what atomic energy is like, Mrs. Elaine Voellmy, teacher, declared.

At present, Johnson and Percy J. Rayford, science department head for the Negro schools, are awaiting recommendations from a teacher committee on a special two-week atomic energy study to be incorporated in science courses.

Meanwhile, classrooms have models of the bomb, an atomic pile and diagrams of the atomic action. Students have prepared posters and reports on various aspects.

The study has perked up interest in the political aspects of the bomb. Johnson reported many have become "extremely concerned about what we're doing about the atomic bomb."

Britain Won't Contact Stalin, Bevin Says

London, March 22 (U.P.)—Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin told Commons today Britain did not intend to make a new approach to Russian Premier Josef Stalin on international control of atomic energy.

Such an approach probably would be unsuccessful and would "only land us into difficulties," Bevin said.

He added that a mere solution to the atomic energy problem would not insure peace.

Bevin's statements were in reply to Laborite Raymond Blackburn who wanted to know what, if any, new proposal Bevin had received from the United States regarding atomic energy and the hydrogen bomb, and what, if any arrangements had been made for consultation with President Truman.

Bevin answered "none" to both counts and reiterated that the atomic problem is before the United Nations.

Blackburn asked, since Bevin and Prime Minister Clement Attlee had rejected any idea of a direct approach by President Truman and Attlee to Stalin, what steps were being taken to bring the matter immediately to the attention of the United Nations.

Blackburn said the U. N. had "done nothing for at least two years upon the most important issue before the world today."

Bevin replied that he disagreed that the United Nations had done nothing and said: "It has been trying to get agreement and failed."

First 4 B-29s Turned Over To British

Marham, England, March 22. (AP). Four American B-29 bombers, capable of putting a heavier wallop into Britain's punching power, arrived as a gift from the United States today. They were the first of the 70 Superfortresses being delivered to the Royal Air Force under the one billion dollar United States military aid program to Atlantic Pact nations.

The planes can pack a 10-ton bomb load on a 2000-mile range—far greater than any of the bombers now being flown by the RAF.

One plane landed with one of its engines dead because of oil line trouble.

Arthur Henderson, secretary of state for air, accepted the bombers as a symbol of "cooperation and peace."

Gen. Leon W. Johnson, who commands the United States Third Air Division in Britain, declared, "These bombers will never strike out: they will only strike back."

The American crews will remain for a time as instructors of the British crews.

Husband Acquitted Of 'Mercy Killing'

Coburg, Ontario, March 22 (AP).—Ralph Kilbon today was acquitted of murder in the "mercy killing" of his mentally ill wife, Irene.

The verdict upheld the defense contention that Mrs. Kilbon, who had wounded herself in a suicide attempt, was "legally and medically dead" when Kilbon fired a rifle bullet into her brain last November.

Sweden Says It Won't Join Atlantic Pact

Stockholm, March 22 (AP).—Sweden has made up her mind definitely not to join the North Atlantic Pact, Foreign Minister Oesten Unden told Parliament today.

He also ruled out the possibility of military cooperation in peacetime between Sweden and two neighbors who are in the pact, Norway and Denmark, on grounds that this "would compromise our proclaimed policy of neutrality." Sweden has not engaged in war for 135 years.

Unden spoke in a foreign affairs debate. He said a newspaper campaign for revision of Swedish policy has produced the impression in some quarters abroad that the government is hesitating.

"It should therefore be pointed out with every emphasis that no such hesitation in fact exists," he said.

The Foreign Minister said Sweden does not wish "to conduct a foreign policy that would contribute to turning our corner of the world into a center of unrest and a point of friction between east and west.

Conferees Complete Cotton Acreage Bill

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A House-Senate conference committee lost no time yesterday agreeing on a new bill to increase the acreages for price-supported cotton and peanuts this year.

The agreement was reached after one short meeting. A week ago the committee was able to bring out a compromise measure only after 11 days of long, and at times angry, debate. That measure was accepted by the House, but was thrown out of the Senate Tuesday on a point of order raised by Senator Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. Mex.), former Secretary of Agriculture.

In addition to increasing some crops, the bill retains a provision permitting the Goyernment to pay freight on surplus commodities given free to public and private welfare agencies for distribution both here and abroad.

Brannan Opposes Clause

This proposal met opposition yesterday from Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan. Brannan wrote the House Agriculture Committee that unlimited give-away programs, such as the bill would permit, might upset the business economy in some communities, by cutting into the normal retail sales of merchants for commodities such as potatoes, etc. It also would add considerable Administration expense, he warned.

Anderson's objection to the first conference bill was aimed at a provision inserted by the conferees that was not in either the bill passed by the House or that passed by the Senate. That provision, urged by Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) would have permitted wheat farmers to plant up to 50,000 acres of additional cotton in land planted last fall to wheat. A strong infestation of green bugs in Oklahoma has virtually killed all wheat on about 50,000 acres.

The green bug provision was dropped from the new compromise. The measure still provides, however, for about 1,200,000 more acres for cotton this year than now permitted. The Government already has more than a billion dollars invested in surplus cotton. This new bill is expected to add another 75 to 100 million dollars worth.

More Peanut Acreage

The bill also permits about 100,000 more acres in peanuts in Alabma and Texas. Peanuts are another crop in surplus.

The provision in the earlier conference bill permitting unlimited growing of peanuts for crushing into oil was changed to restrict peanuts for oil to the 1947 level. It also provides safeguards against increased Government losses in the crushing operation.

The new bill states in clearer language than before that potato growers who reject marketing agreements—a mild, voluntary form of production controls—will lose all price support this year.

ASTHMA MUCUS
For Thousands of Sufferers

If you have tried a lot of things and still cough, wheeze and can't sleep or breathe well, because of recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma, you can't know what happiness and satisfaction may be yours until you try the doctor's formula called MENDACO. Not a smoke, injection or spray, but an internal medicine which works through the blood, thus reaching the lungs and bronchial tubes. A Chicago physician reports that it helped over ninety percent of a large group of his patients and over 5,000 doctors have requested physician's supplies. Get MENDACO from your druggist. See how quickly it may help loosen and remove thick strangling mucus, thus alleviating coughing of Bronchial Asthma, and promoting freer breathing and better sleep. Money back guaranteed unless MENDACO satisfies.

Flat Cut in Funds Bill Likely to Be Republican Goal in House

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

House Republican leaders yesterday predicted the House will cut another slice out of the big 29-billion-dollar omnibus appropriation bill, but delayed a decision on GOP economy goals.

"Of course we can cut it," House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (Mass.), told newsmen following a meeting of the House GOP Policy Committee.

Martin called another meeting of his House high command for Tuesday to frame a Republican motion to recommit the bill and decide on amounts, amid increasing indications of Democratic support for some further pruning.

No Figure By Taber

Representative John Taber (R., N. Y.), ranking member of the House Appropriations group, declined to name a specific figure. Taber hinted, however, at a "two-bite" Republican attack on the "package" measure, already whittled back $979,489,060 by the appropriations committee.

Taber indicated he may move on the floor for a flat cut, aimed chiefly at Government "overstaffing" and later move to recommit the bill for additional savings. The recommit motion presently under consideration in effect would require the Administration to make the cut by impounding a fixed amount.

Democratic members of the committee opened fire at proposals to require the President to do the cutting as "passing the buck" to the White House.

"It seems to me that would be dodging our responsibility," said Representative Albert Gore (D., Tenn.). "I will not vote to abrogate congressional responsibility for making appropriations."

To Split Democratic Ranks

The Republican motion, when it comes, is expected to split Democratic ranks wide open. A number of Democrats have indicated they will vote for further cuts of up to a billion or more, if the Republican motion is "nonpolitical."

Republicans meanwhile were weighing various methods of cutting the bill in a search for a winning motion. Martin said the GOP policy committee will probably decide on a formula Tuesday. Later a full conference of all House Republicans will be called.

"They are not going to rush this bill through," said Martin. "We are going to take a good, long look at it."

During yesterday's GOP policy huddle Taber told the group many of the committee cuts were "phonies" and Representative Frank B. Keefe (R., Wis.) complained that hospital projects were cut indiscriminately.

Taber earlier issued a formal statement saying he would "try to provide a constructive amendment which will permit the Congress to go on record on the question of whether they want to balance the budget."

Taber told reporters this did not necessarily mean he would try to cut another two to three billion dollars from the omnibus measure.

"You can't do it all on this bill," he said. "We will have other opportunities on ECA and costly domestic legislation."

House Appropriations Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) said he didn't see how another big cut can be made "in view of our obligations at home and abroad."

Short-Range Help Advised For Indo-China

By Homer Bigart
NYHT News Service

The Communist threat in French Indo-China has become so acute that a special United States mission to southeast Asia has advised the State Department to concentrate on shortrange assistance programs designed to help the French achieve political and military stability, it was learned last night.

Robert Allen Griffin, head of a State Department technical survey mission, cabled an urgent recommendation from Saigon that the United States underwrite a public health program for Indo-China, thus relieving the dollar drain on metropolitan France.

He also urged that the United States immediately supply quantities of hand tools for farming, particularly rice hoes.

He has reported "appalling" conditions in areas liberated from rebel forces of the Communist leader Ho Chi Minh. The mission believes that the liberating troops could make a good impression on the natives by bringing medical supplies and hand tools into recaptured villages.

Gems Worth $5000 Found in Theft Case

Baltimore, March 22 (AP).—Stolen jewels valued at $5000 have been dug from the backyard garden of a confessed burglar, State Attorney J. Bernard Wells disclosed today.

The buried loot was found by police in the yard of Kenneth Cave, 22, who confessed in Criminal Court last week that he had taken part in a $20,000 jewel robbery from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Lapides. The recovered jewels have been tentatively identified as their property.

Owner Plans Empire Bldg. Restoration

Definite plans to rebuild the Empire Building, which collapsed and killed four persons in December, 1947, were announced yesterday.

Warren G. Sargent, architect for Owner Nick Papanicolas, said plans have been drawn to restore and rebuild the empty shell at 9th st. and New York ave. nw., as a four-story, 54-room hotel.

Bids have been sought on the construction contract, he said, and it is hoped the work will be completed in about six months.

Still lacking, however, is permission from the District. The building was built before zoning regulations were adopted here, and the building does not meet side and backyard requirements. Sargent appeared before the Board of Zoning Adjustment yesterday to ask that a variance be granted so the restoration could proceed.

After an eight-hour hearing, the board took this and 29 other requests under advisement. Decisions are expected today. Other cases heard by the board included:

1. Request for permission to use 8¼ acres of the historic Woodley estate, 3000 Cathedral ave., nw. as a school. Former home of Henry L. Stimson and summer White House for four Presidents, the estate was sold last month by Phillips Academy to Ned Bord, Washington real estate man, and others. The Maret School has agreed to swap its property elsewhere in the city for a portion of the estate if the BZA permits it to be used for school purposes.

2. Request for permission to erect a 130-foot high parking garage on a 25 by 80-foot lot at 1426 K st., nw. Leon F. Lamb, vice president of Parking Service, Inc., said it would include 18-stories, two underground, and park 72 cars —or four to a floor.

$1,115,000 Robbery Nets 2 Boys Nothing

San Francisco, March 22 (U.P.).—Two boys who staged a $1,115,000 robbery at the home of Chinese Vice Consul Wang Shao-kai learned today the money was "funny."

The boys, 12 and 13, each carried a savings bank stuffed with a total of 46 Chinese bills of $25,000 denomination when arrested.

The money was retired Nationalist China currency—not worth a cent.

set aside and that Dodson be released in bond pending appeal.

Before the case went to the jury yesterday, the prosecution introduced two psychiatrists to dispute the testimony of two defense psychiatrists who testified on Tuesday they believed Dodson was insane at the time of the crimes.

They were Dr. Joseph R. Blalock, superintendent of Southwestern State Hospital at Marion, Va., and Dr. Granville Jones of Eastern State Hospital at Williamsburg, Va., both of whom examined Dodson before the trial.

Both testified they believed Dodson sane at the time of the alleged crimes. But they conceded under cross-examination it was "possible" he was mentally unbalanced at the time as the result of his general war ordeal—or more directly as the result of a bomb explosion in December of 1944 in England that Dodson said hurled him 35 to 50 feet.

In his final arguments to the jury, Rucker scoffed at the defense contention that Dodson was insane and said:

"We are getting on mighty dangerous grounds when every vicious crime can be discounted by a psychiatrist."

Rucker insisted that the precautions taken by Dodson, such as masking his face and hiding his car around the corner from the house, were the logical steps of a sane man.

He appealed to the jury not to free Dodson so that "something like this will happen again." Rucker's summation was restrained and brief, but at the end he rapped sharply three times on the jury box and said:

"When that knock comes at the door the next time, let's be sure it isn't Dodson."

Former State Senator Frank L. Ball, who teamed with John Paul Jones in handling the defense, made a dramatic plea to the jury for acquittal.

"Release this sick man," he asked, "so that he can get the treatment he needs and regain what he lost overseas in the service of his country."

Ball offered his "profound sympathy" to Mr. and Mrs. Bartels for the "terrible ordeal" to which they were subjected. He said Dodson himself is deeply sorry for what happened.

Ball argued that the events as related by Mr. and Mrs. Bartels were so "fantastic and inconsistent" they could not possibly have been the actions of a sane man.

For the second time in the trial, defense attorney Jones moved for a directed verdict of innocent but this was denied by Judge Abbott.

E. Capitol St. Bridge Favored

the subcommittee's indorsement of the bill.

The bill now goes to the full House District Committee, scheduled to meet on April 3.

Davis called the afternoon meeting after the subcommittee heard final discussion on the bill by General Grant and by Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, District Engineer Commissioner, in a morning closed-door meeting.

Subcommittee members said the final discussion went along in terms that were definite but courteous, and that it passed without a flareup between the two generals. In public hearings, General Grant had called the Commissioner's bridge plan extravagant, and General Young had retorted that General Grant was giving muddled figures to the subcommittee.

Estimated cost of the bridge at the E. Capitol st. site is nearly 12 million dollars.

The subcommittee wrote an amendment into the bill to say that neither the bridge, nor any of its approaches or connecting roads should cut through the National Arboretum in Northeast Washington on the west bank of the Anacostia.

Virginian Exempt From Income Tax Offers $100 Gift

Richmond, March 22 (U.P.).—Internal Revenue collectors opened a letter today from a newly-naturalized citizen whose income was too small to be taxable.

They found a check for $25 inside and a pledge to pay $75 more in quarterly installments.

The note said: "I shall welcome the day when I make enough money to pay taxes."

to free enterprise" opposed both Administration moves as bait to get enough votes so that principles of the measure would be finally enacted.

As finally approved the bill consisted mainly of financial assistance to the private building industry.

The bill provides:

1. Another $2,750,000,000 for the Government to insure mortgages under the program of the Federal Housing Administration.

2. The Federal National Mortgage Association of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation with another 750 million dollars to create a secondary market for housing mortgages.

3. Another 600 million dollars for the Government to insure mortgages on multiple dwelling units.

Mr. Truman's telegraphed appeal from Key West, Fla., was read aloud by a clerk at the start of the day's debate.

The President said the provision would help families with incomes of $2800 to $4400 a year who don't want Government subsidies for their homes but who can't pay the rental or sales prices now being asked. The measure as a whole, the President said, "offers great benefits to the country which transcend any partisan considerations."

Democratic Leader John McCormack (D., Mass.) told the Republicans that regardless of the blow cooperative housing took yesterday it will be a political issue in the November elections.

It's All a Mistake, Man in Store Says; But He's Held

It was all a mistake, Wallace T. Smith, 24, told Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence yesterday.

Smith, accused of housebreaking and grand larceny, admitted being in Meenehan's hardware store, 3241 M st. nw., March 15. But, Smith said, the door was ajar, and he had gone in after he heard a noise inside and suspected someone was up to no good.

He said he had found a box of tools on the floor, which were in his possession when he was arrested inside the store by Pvt. G. M. Downs. He explained that he had also found an overcoat which he was wearing and which, according to police, contained a number of knives.

Lawrence ordered Smith held for the grand jury in $5000 bond.

in the downtown area," Carr said.

"In view of the House committee's position on Marshall Heights, wouldn't it be better to start fresh rather than continuing to hammer away in a deadlocked fight which apparently is lost?" he added. "Of course, I realize resettlement of displaced persons in highly congested down-town locations offers many problems, but I think a new attack offers better chances of solution than we presently have at Marshall Heights."

The homebuilding spokesman said his industry was earnestly concerned about needs in the low-cost housing field and expressed confidence that local slum clearance acts could become operative.

Carr also plugged strongly for a tightened housing code, now in final stages of completion at the District Building, as one immediate way to rehabilitate substandard housing here.

Mark Lansburgh, chairman of the Redevelopment Land Agency, said he was "terribly discouraged" the Marshall Heights project seems to be doomed for the time being, both because so much preliminary planning work has gone into it and because "I still think the area, with so much vacant land for replacement housing, is an ideal place to start local slum clearance."

Lansburgh, joined by John Ihlder, executive director of National Capitol Housing Authority, also said the time had come to consider an alternate downtown site.

The Commissioners, who last spring approved the Marshall Heights redevelopment plan after public hearings, are known now to be ready to quit on the project for the present. They have assured NCPPC they will back them on Marshall Heights as long as it has a chance of receiving the Capitol Hill greenlight, but have just about given up.

Giant FOOD DEPARTMENT STORES

Pies are as American as baseball! They're the delicious dessert that everyone everywhere likes.

In Heidi pie are the finest ingredients — choice "makin's" that set them apart and above the run-of-the-mill pies produced by purely commercial methods.

Excellence in every respect is the quality that sets the standard in all Heidi bakery products. And, as you know, they're sold exclusively in GIANT's 20 stores serving the metropolitan area of the Nation's Capital.

So you'll have a grand assortment from which to choose the pies your family likes best, this week Heidi offers a choice of seven different kinds. Five are featured below. The two others are French apple and pumpkin. You'll find all seven in your neighborhood GIANT.

Every Pie in Its Own Pie Tin

Most pies are at their best when they're served piping hot. So you may do this easily, and so you can carry it home in perfect condition, every Heidi pie is sold in its own tin. No deposit, and no return necessary.

Rich APPLE 49¢

The "No. 1" pie in most homes. Made from luscious, flavorful apples that reach a new high in tender taste. And Heidi's own special pastry crust fairly crumbles at the approach of a fork.

Sour CHERRY 49¢

Especially popular in the Spring of the year. The pitted cherries that make this pie's filling have a tart, distinctive flavor much more appealing than the usual "sweet" taste of the average cherry pie.

Lemon MERINGUE 49¢

Made of fresh lemons—and the thick meringue that tops it is made from GIANT'S own Grade "AA" eggs produced on nearby farms specializing in producing the best quality eggs.

Cocoanut Custard 49¢

One of our best liked "open face" pies. Its rich cream custard filling is generously shot through with long shreds of fine cocoanut. The crust, too, is made according to Heidi's own fine recipe.

Cocoanut CREAM 49¢

Heidi's "Hit-of-the-Week" this week. Which means its a special offering of a popular delicacy that has found great favor even at a higher price. Try one of these. We're sure it will make you a regular Heidi "fan."

Youth Wins $9000 Award For Injuries

A consent judgment of $9000 was given yesterday in District Court for injuries received by a 14-year-old boy when a fire-escape counterweight fell on his head in 1948.

The youth is Robert Cook of 1324 14th st. nw. He suffered a cracked skull and other injuries when the 90-pound weight fell as he was lifting a fire-escape ladder adjacent to 1301 14th st. nw.

Defendant in the case was Jacque Heidenheimer of 1740 Lanier pl. nw., who owned the building where the accident occurred. Robert Cook received $8370.80 for his injuries, his father received $150 for expenses and the Travelers Insurance Co. received $479.20 for compensation paid.

According to the Cook attorneys, Joseph D. Bulman and Max Ammerman, the boy has recovered from his injuries which resulted in nervousness and shock.

Dillon S. Myer Named Indian Commissioner

Key West, Fla., March 22 (AP).—President Truman today appointed Dillon S. Myer of Ohio, to the post of Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross at a 4p. m. news conference on this naval station told reporters Mr. Truman signed today a nomination for Myer, wartime director of the War Relocation Authority, which handled the transfer of Japanese from the West coast, to be Indian Affairs Commissioner.

He succeeds Dr. John R. Nichols, who is leaving "reluctantly" after full consideration of "long-range plans." Dr. Nichols is staying on temporarily in Government as a special assistant to Secretary of Interior Chapman.

An announcement is expected later on a new chairman of the National Securities Resources Board.

Earlier the President went fishing, primarily as an observer, wearing a gaudy new sports shirt of yellow stripes down each side and a new white sports fishing cap with a green bill of prodigious length.

Presidential Secretary William D. Hassett caught one fish, Commander Donald MacDonald, skipper of the Williamsburg, another.

"I just went along for the ride," the President told newsmen.

The new Indian Affairs commissioner has spent many years in the Federal service. He has served as assistant chief of the Soil Conservation and Adjustment Administration and commissioner of the Public Housing Administration (in 1946). Later, he was president of the Institute of Inter-American Affairs.

He was in the limelight most as director of the war-time war-relocating authority when he handled the evacuation of Japanese from the Pacific coast.

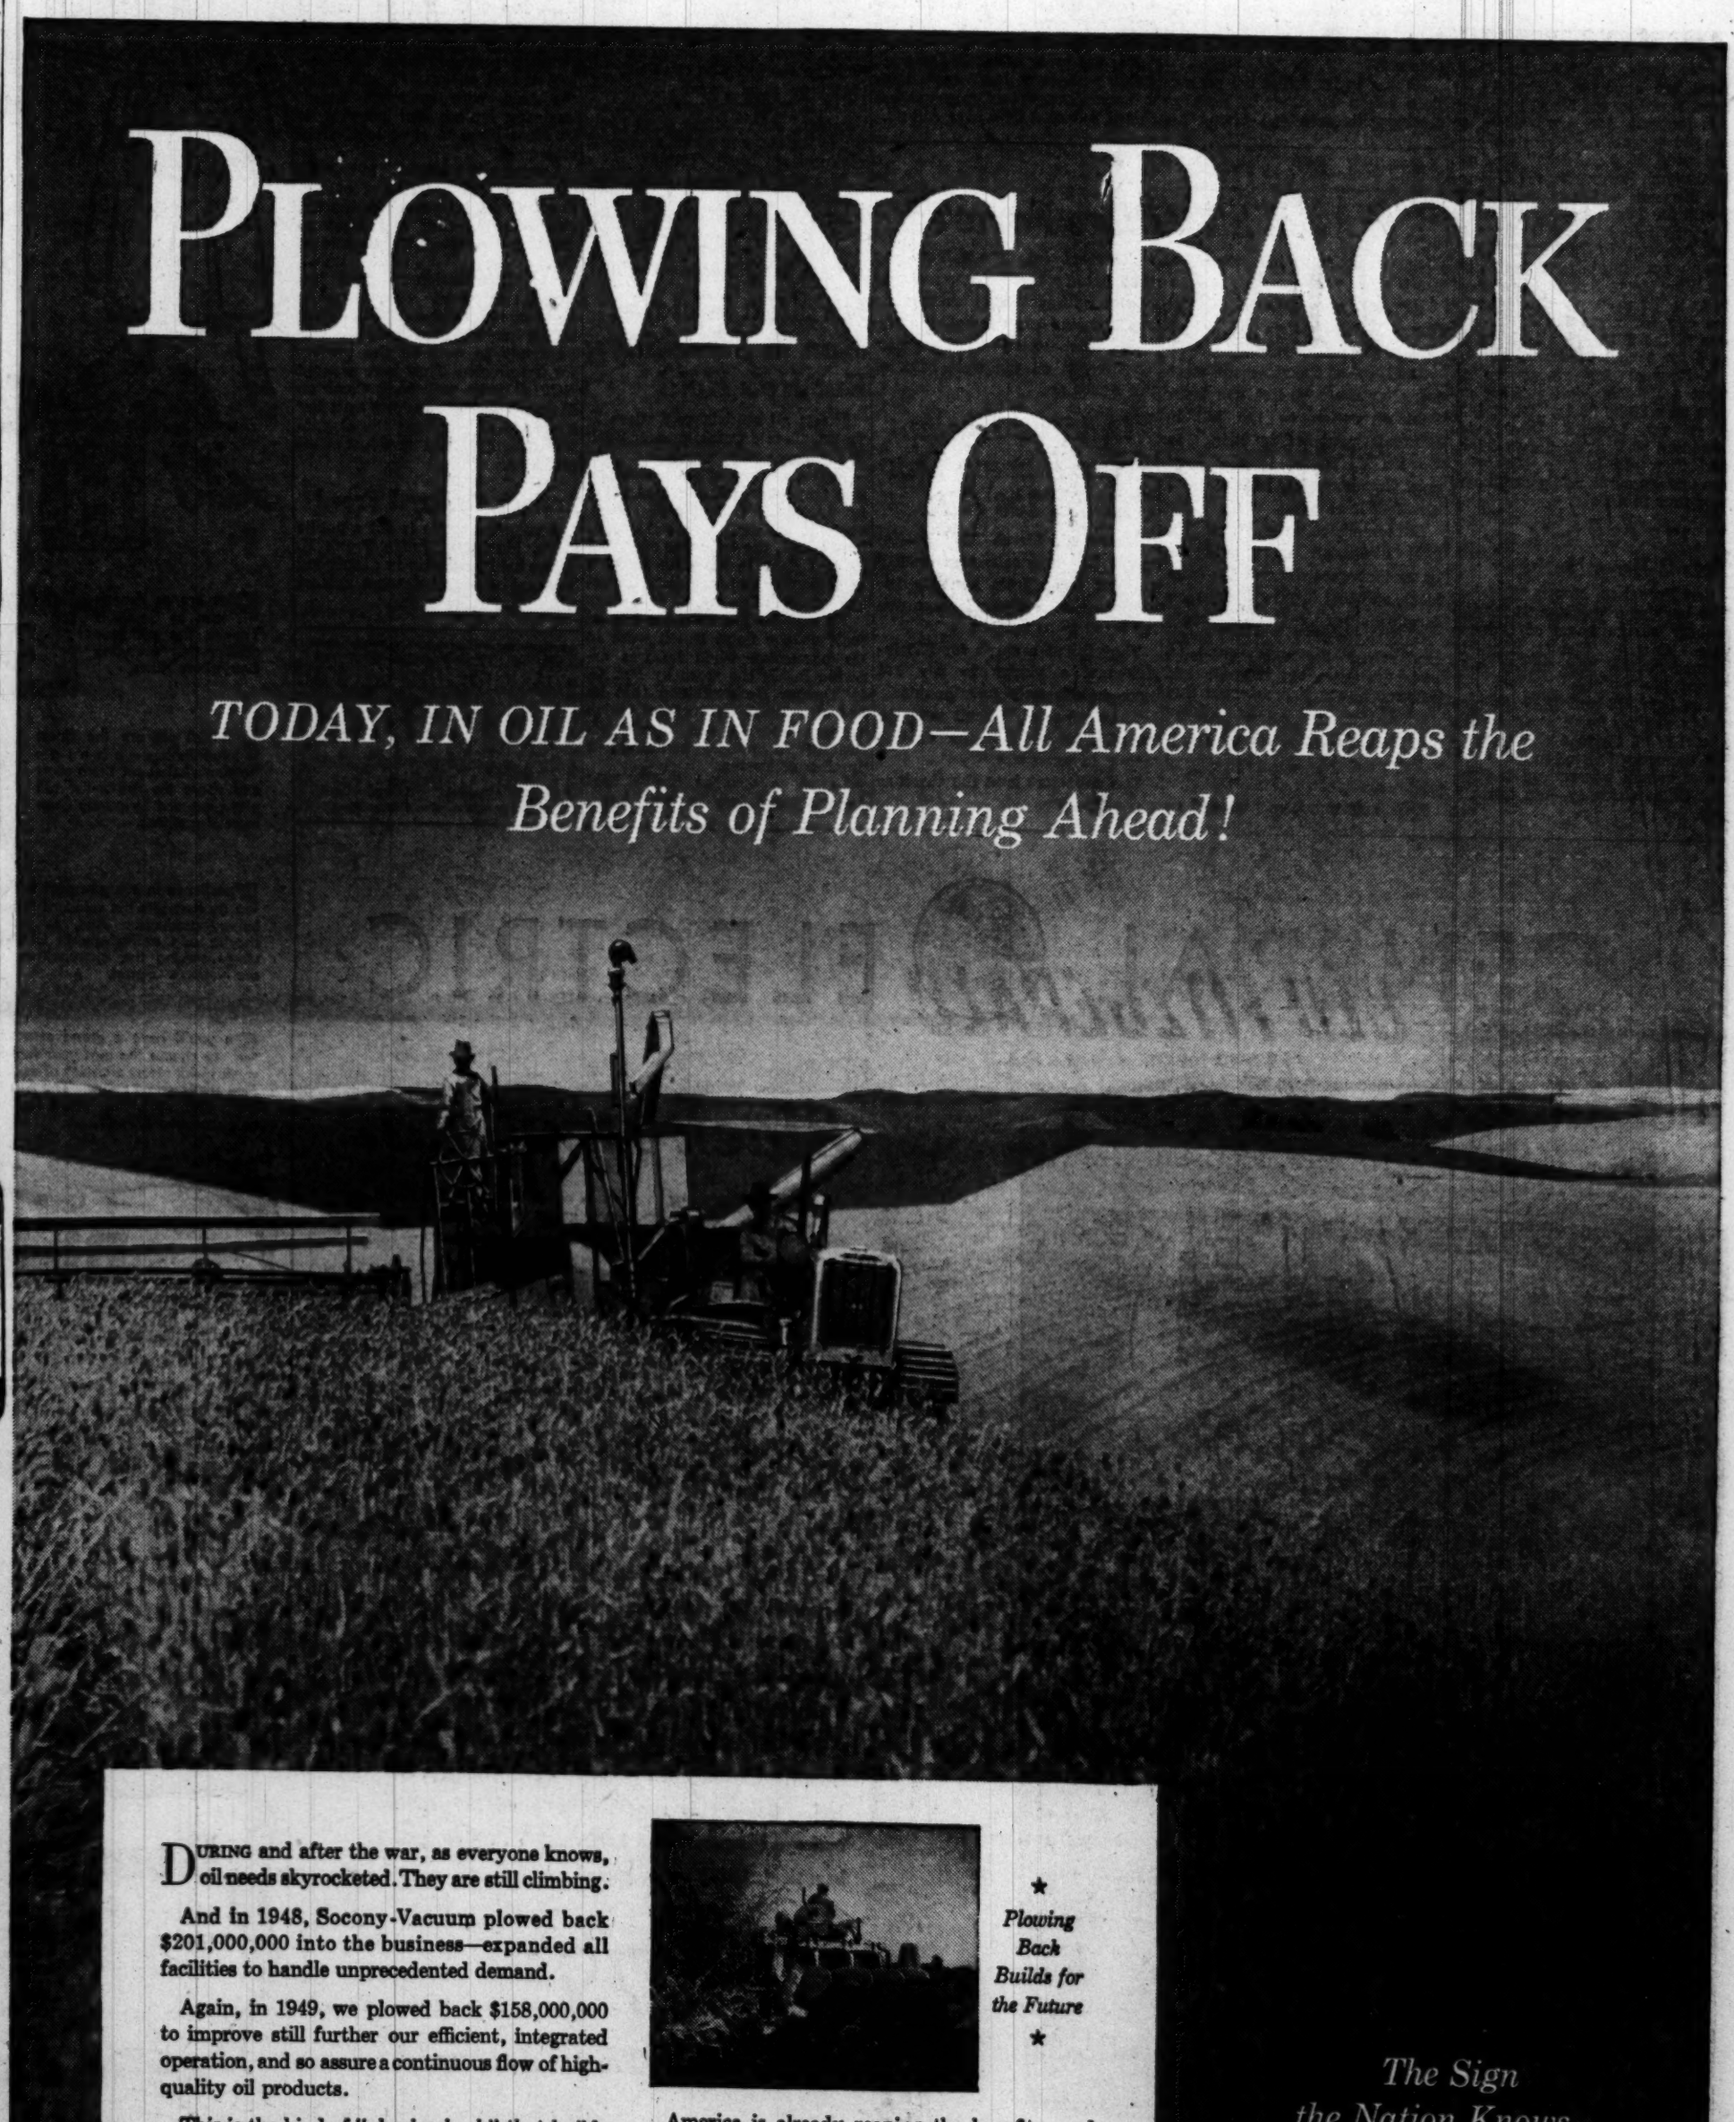
PLOWING BACK PAYS OFF

TODAY, IN OIL AS IN FOOD—All America Reaps the Benefits of Planning Ahead!



DURING and after the war, as everyone knows, oil needs skyrocketed. They are still climbing.

And in 1948, Socony-Vacuum plowed back $201,000,000 into the business—expanded all facilities to handle unprecedented demand.

Again, in 1949, we plowed back $158,000,000 to improve still further our efficient, integrated operation, and so assure a continuous flow of high-quality oil products.

This is the kind of "plowing back" that builds for the future . . . that makes for National Security . . . that assures oil supply for growing millions of cars, homes and mechanized farms, for expanding aviation and every industry that relies on more oil to produce a bigger money's-worth for you.

★ Plowing Back Builds for the Future ★

America is already reaping the benefits, and more and more benefits are coming.

Socony-Vacuum, as one of the oldest petroleum companies, is proud of the part it has played in a progressive industry—will continue to look ahead and plow back.

Girl, 12, Says She Lived With Abductor, 56, Two Years Through Fear She'd Be Arrested

San Jose, Calif., March 22 (U.P.). Twelve-year-old Sally Horner accused a former convict today of forcing her to live with him nearly two years by threatening to send her to prison for the theft of a dime-store notebook.

Mann Act charges were lodged against Frank Lasalle, 56, after the plump, honey-haired youngster from Camden, N. J., told how he held her in his power 21 months by claiming to be an FBI agent. He was held in lieu of $10,000 bond.

Lasalle's record includes conviction for rape and arrests for bigamy, indecent assault and enticing minors.

Sally, a seventh grader whose second set of teeth have just grown out, said Lasalle abducted her by guile from her Camden home, that she had sexual relations with him out of fear that he would turn her in.

Lasalle, thin-faced and gray-haired, denied her accusations of intimacies or that he held her against her will. He said Sally's mother, Mrs. Ella Horner, was his second wife. In Camden, Mrs. Horner, a widow, said she had never met Lasalle.

"He told me he was a Federal officer," Sally related through sobs. She will be 13 April 16.

Officers picked up the pair yesterday after Sally seized a chance when Lasalle went shopping to telephone her older sister, Mrs. Susan Panara, Beverly, N. J., and asked her to "send the FBI right away."

"To join a girl's club at school," Sally related, "I had to steal something from the five-and-dime. I took a little notebook off the five-cent counter and he stopped me. He said 'I am an FBI agent. You are under arrest'."

That was June, 1948. She said he told her he would not take her to jail if "I would report to him from time to time." The next day, she said, he met her coming home from school.

"He said he would have to take me to Atlantic City. He telephoned my mother and said he was taking me and some other girls to Atlantic City. I went with him and a woman, about 25 years old. He called her 'Miss Robinson' and said she was his secretary and he paid her $90 a week. Instead of going to Atlantic City we went to Baltimore. Miss Robinson disappeared and I never saw her again."

"He told me that if I went back home, or they sent for me, of if I ran away I'd go to prison," she told Sheriff Howard Hornbuckle.

From Baltimore, they moved to Dallas, Tex., where LaSalle worked several months as an automobile mechanic, the FBI reported. Sally posed as his daughter, attending parochial schools in Baltimore, Dallas and finally in San Jose where they arrived three weeks ago.

Surveying Crime

A determined undercover effort is being made to kill the Kefauver crime investigation bill before it reaches the Senate floor. This is reflected by the belated attempt to place the investigation under the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee instead of the Judiciary Committee, where it belongs—a squabble to be settled this week in the Rules Committee. Clearly more than the mere regulatory function of the Commerce Committee is involved in a sweeping crime inquiry of the kind proposed. Whatever the motives of those trying to bottle up the bill, their attempt to frustrate investigation of the facts does them no credit. Nor would specific legislation proposed by the Department of Justice to cover such items as use of communications and interstate shipment of gambling devices meet the whole need. That would be a piecemeal approach. What is important is to get the whole picture before specific legislative correctives are enacted. The first step is for the Rules Committee to permit no sabotage of the Kefauver bill in speeding it to a Senate vote.

Mr. Lie's Visit

With the United Nations in a state of crisis, more than usual interest attaches to the speech in Washington Tuesday night of the Secretary General, Mr. Trygvie Lie. Mr. Lie did not encourage what Admiral Nimitz has aptly called "worry-mongering." On the contrary, he sought to redirect men's minds along channels which might realize the basic purpose of the United Nations, viz, the settlement of international disputes. As to the overhanging one, the Russo-Western conflict, his aim is to restore the functioning of the Security Council. To that end his plan for the acceptance of "representation" instead of national recognition as the basis of U. N. membership is still before the major nations. The application, of course, is to Communist China. The United States is on record as willing to accept a majority vote, but the Soviet Union is still waiting huffily in the wings because the Nationalists still occupy the Chinese seat.

Perhaps the best way to end the deadlock is the invocation of a forgotten article in the Charter that Mr. Lie suggests. The article is No. 28. After providing for the continuous functioning of the Security Council, the article goes on to say that the members may be represented "by a member of the government or by some other specially designated representative." It is Mr. Lie's view that the present state of things calls for the members to delegate their foreign ministers to sit together. There are, apparently, two reasons for this. First, to get the Security Council started again as a full body, and secondly, to deal with some of the Russo-Western problems at issue, particularly the Chinese Communist difficulty. It is a sound proposal. Mr. Lie believes, and we do, that there should never be "a last word in diplomacy," as William Jennings Bryan once said.

Edgar Rice Burroughs

The late Mr. Edgar Rice Burroughs, who for 37 years was wholly without intellectual interests, and who had, it seems, almost an antipathy to books, suddenly became one of the most popular and successful imaginative writers in the whole history of literature. What makes his story all the stranger is that he chose to write about subjects of which he knew as little as his readers. He was ignorant of astronomy, yet his first work of fiction was about Mars. He had never seen an ape outside of a zoo; he never set foot in Africa; but the life of apes in the remotest African jungles was the subject of all his subsequent books. They were translated into virtually all the languages there are, except of course, the Simian language from which the name of the principal character, Tarzan, was supposed to have been derived. The royalties began to roll in in a steadily swelling flood; bids for the movie rights went higher and higher. Burroughs had to do something with his profits, so he put them into California real estate, and the value of his investments doubled, trebled, quadrupled in no time.

What was the quality that made Edgar Rice Burroughs one of the wealthiest authors of his own or of any age and made his name known to tens of millions to whom such names as Homer, Virgil, Dante, Shakespeare and Cervantes mean nothing at all? This is only a way of asking what were the special joys they found in his work, which they could never have found in the work of, let us say, James Joyce or T. S. Eliot. The answer seems to be that the Tarzan books gave to their readers the means of egress from a world they found weary, stale and unprofitable into a world of enchantment and delights. One does not disparage the Tarzan books by calling them a "literature of escape," since the term applies with equal accuracy to all great imaginative literature. The Tarzan tales are fairy tales; and the tree-top bower perhaps as near as the mass mind and the machine-age imagination are capable of approaching toward those

Victimized CAB

The conclusion is inescapable that Chairman Rooney of the House Appropriations Subcommittee has indulged a personal vendetta against the Civil Aeronautics Board. For weeks there have been stories to the effect that Mr. Rooney had threatened to cut the CAB appropriation by a million dollars because of enmity toward CAB Chairman O'Connell. The appropriation approved by the Rooney subcommittee is $923,000 less than the $4,323,000 asked by the Bureau of the Budget. This cut of 21 percent is recommended despite the facts that the CAB, because of inadequate staff, is only just now able to get out reports on accidents that happened as long ago as June, 1949, and that decisions in regulatory matters are lagging from 14 to 18 months behind.

If the CAB were a large agency, there might be some reason to believe it could absorb even a 21 percent cut, though there would be no excuse at all for cutting on personality grounds. But the CAB is among the smallest of the regulatory commissions, and it must deal with the country's most rapidly expanding transportation industry. Under the fiscal 1950 appropriation of $3,649,000 it had only 642 employes for all phases of rate and route regulation as well as air safety investigation. It had asked for 98 more employes, including 10 in air safety; under the cut it would have to reduce its force by 96 persons.

Significantly, the subcommittee showed great concern over air safety, and indicated that there should be no cut in this function. Yet even under the existing budget the CAB has had to ground its transport aircraft used in testing safety devices for subsequent regulations; its pilots have not even been able to maintain their proficiency. How can the CAB be expected to give the scrutiny that the safety of air passengers actually demands, much less the attention required by the important rate and route proceedings before it, if it is to be crippled even further? Irrespective of any dilatoriness the CAB may have shown in the separation of mail pay and subsidy, the drastic slash is a prime piece of irresponsibility. We hope that the full House and the Senate will view the CAB's needs in some perspective.

Drowning Out The Nation's Voice

Never in recent times has such a miasma settled upon the Washington scene. Doubt, distrust, lack of confidence—they are rampant. Even those with mud on their hands can throw mud with impunity. To foreigners the American scene must look as if our major concern is to breed a race of informers and intellectual eunuchs. The reason for the malaise, it seems to us, is that leadership is not measuring up to the potential followership. There is a rending conflict between the President and the opposition. But this cannot be resolved till presidential leadership has been filled.

And in this latter respect there is nobody but the President who can assume the responsibility. The President and his Secretary of State have been playing Alphonse and Gaston. Mr. Truman wants to give Mr. Acheson his head, but Mr. Acheson simply hasn't the party or popular standing to sustain him. The speeches he gave on the West Coast came back to the Capital with a hollow echo, whatever may have been their effect upon the country at large. It may be that the wild and whirring McCarthy might yet make Acheson a national figure. But the stated purpose of the Republican chiefs, speaking while the Tydings inquiry is still on, is to destroy him. This is hardly a promising curtain-raiser for the April meeting of the Foreign Ministers. In any event the fact remains that the President as well as Mr. Acheson must get into the act.

Actually Mr. Acheson never wanted the role of substantive responsibility that Mr. Truman seems to be thrusting upon him. He has rigid ideas about the leadership function of the White House in foreign relations. He saw in the Secretaryship of Mr. Byrnes what he thinks was a bad example of a Secretary who seemed to be out in front of the President. And on taking office he determined to lean over backward in deferring to the President's primacy. In strange silence the President has handed him a role that must be as uncongenial as it is uncomfortable and unrewarding.

The President, however, is the primate, and nobody else. He is the elected choice of all the people—not as an administrative chief, but as a voice, as custodian and cement and driving force of their unity. Under our system he can be as big, as Wilson said, as he makes his office. It is in the nature of the institutions of this Republic that drift in the White House leaves the country rudderless. The Presidency is the fixed point in our corporate life—we dare to say, in the life of the entire free world. A Frenchman said the other day that American power must be on the side of people's hopes. No other member of the free world has the moral let alone the material resources to demonstrate any strong faith in its destiny. Europeans are living for the day only; Asiatics from hand to mouth. Only the United States can furnish the battering ram against a condition which is a historical "great panic." The future has to be challenged if the present is to be saved.

Yet there is this void at the top in the Capital, and the Capital, in consequence, is given over to the raucous spirit of faction against which George Washington issued his last warning. It is not a situation of normal party division. A progressive debility is seizing the body politic. The reaction in the country is bound to be felt sooner or later in the same day-to-day outlook that has captured the Old World. It is enough of a drain on human nature to bear the silent conflict in the world without having to go without inspiration from the Nation's leaders. In time this moral passivity at the summit is sure to trickle down through the layers of society till nothing seems worth while. "The vigor of civilized societies," said A. N. Whitehead, the philosopher, "is preserved by the widespread sense that high aims are worth while."

Evidence of neglect at the top in upholding morale started with the shattering emptiness of the H-bomb announcement. You can't do this to a democracy. The State Department line is that the ending of our atomic monopoly failed by any manner of means to change power relationships. It is a singular attitude. Few Americans seem to share it, and all Europe has a contrary opinion, for it is since the recent atomic events that the idea of a neutral Europe has grown in Europe. Even the belated start in shipping arms under the military aid program has not sufficed to offset that reaction. And it is bound to gather strength from the exhibition of the current jitters and hysteria. So, on top of Asiatic strife, there is European disintegration and defeatism to cope with.

Truly the burden is cast upon America to show not only cohesion but example to nations which are themselves tearing their unity apart on issues which are irrelevant to the master issue of survival and the assertion of common values.

Yet the President is not altogether to blame for the impasse in leadership. He is a modest man with no sense of mission. But looking at his record, nobody can say he lacks courage. If he is given a program to expound, and it appeals to him, he is not afraid to assume the responsibility. He showed leadership on the Truman Doctrine. It was his own jogging of the introverted State Department that laid the train for the Marshall Plan. When the diplomats seemed to have run out of ideas, he turned to his immediate advisers, and they suggested Point IV, and he adopted it over the head of the diplomats. Instinctively the President wants to use American power for the common good. But around him there is a lack of that creative imagination which must always be at the elbow of the President to inspire as well as to spur.

So the need on the Executive side, as we see it, is twofold.

1. Reassertion of continuing Executive leadership in our world affairs.

2. More dynamic staff work in the White House and State Department to keep that leadership primed for the carrying out of the critical assignment that history has put on the American doorstep.

In these events there might be some chance of mending and expanding the bipartisan approach to foreign affairs. In these times there must be some biparty respect for the water's edge. The Executive has never been continuously loyal to bipartisanship. It is chiefly Senator Vandenberg that the country must thank for what success has been achieved so far in bipartisanship. Now Vandenberg is ill, and the yawning rift testifies to the loss of his disinterested services. Nevertheless there is a responsible Republican leadership, and the President must invite its cooperation. For you can never have total diplomacy in the sense advocated by Mr. Acheson when the two parties are clawing at each other's throat.

It is surely apparent that ranks can be closed in the country only when there is evidence that they are closed in the Capital. This is no plea for any coalition, for there is plenty of room for partisanship. The trouble is that there is so much of it around nowadays that patriotism is being crowded out. More of it and this country will begin to look to the people of another planet like a blinded Samson pulling down the pillars on which the house standeth.

SONNET

Lock up the spring-house. Let the flowers grow.
Careless and whichway on every window sill.
I have heard voices under earth that know
Much wisdom from their sleep beneath the hill.

No misty willow by the urn may hide
Immortal scripture on the canceled tomb,
Whether the frugal friar lay there or the bride,
They both are peaceful in their narrow room.

For body only do I bed for rest,
My spirit was above the blades you cast.
And like the dead I lean most unimpressed
On stone that succors when the spirit passed.

I am brave for I was ever free,
Or shall be now with my new livery.

Formosa's Cost

I believe the following cablegram, sent to Senator Tom Connally by American missionaries in Shanghai, will be of interest to your readers, as representative of American opinion in China:

Urge reconsideration Congressional action granting further aid Formosa. Such aid gives moral support wholesale airraids Chinese cities by Formosa regime beginning Shanghai raid February 6. Such vengeful bombings result only untold sufferings millions and increased resentment against America. Signing for 44 American missionaries. List follows by mail.

The 44 signatories mentioned, with three others, who wished their names added after the cablegram was sent, were as follows:

"Case in the Flesh"

In your March 15 editorial, "Case In The Flesh," you say "In truth Case No. 1 turned out to be not only an outraged and innocent American, but also a woman of spirit." For what reason do men and women of position, influence, and (supposedly) superior intelligence lend their names to any and every organization?

In an article in the Saturday Evening Post within the past year, Dorothy Thompson acknowledged her gullibility, and everyone must be aware of Mrs Eleanor Roosevelt's weakness for the "down trodden" Communists.

We in this country have a right to be incensed and may well ask Dorothy Thompson and others as to "what redress is available" to those who were misled and influenced by the association of the names of the so-called "smeared" with the various subversive organizations? By their dilettantism they "smeared" themselves.

Sales Tax Yield

The District income tax shows no reduction, despite promises that a sales-tax, if adopted, would result in lower taxes. This, in turn, affords opportunity to show Washingtonians how they are being mulcted on what is euphoniously termed a "2 percent tax." Actually, on a 13-cent purchase, it is an 8 percent tax. On 16 cents, it is 6 percent; on 20 cents, 5 percent; on 25 cents, 4 percent, and on 33-cent purchases, 3 percent. Not until the purchase totals 50 cents, does the purchaser pay as low as the 2 percent tax which it is represented as being. Obviously, if it is a 2 percent tax, it should commence at 50 cents.

The high yields from this—far above expections—are encouraging officials to find more ways to spend it; none voices a word for its repeal. All such taxes will go on and on—until and unless the electorate, including Washingtonians with votes "at home," vote only for economy-minded legislators.

"Blow To Education"

I am disappointed that in your March 16 editorial, "Blow to Education," you commented only in very general terms without getting down to the basic reason for the defeat of the Thomas bill.

Cardinal Spellman and less renowned vilifiers are responsible for injecting the church and state issue into the problem of education. It is not unreasonable to conjecture that Cardinal Spellman proclaimed Congressman Barden a bigot and later pronounced Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt an "unfit American mother" in order to stir up sufficient controversy to prevent the passage of any aid to education legislation that would not include aid to parochial schools. Cardinal Spellman may well have decided that if parochial schools could not receive Federal aid, it would serve his purpose better that no schools receive Federal aid.

I am disappointed in your editorial. Certainly your failure to discuss these reasons will in no way deter future attempts to inject religious issues into similar controversies.

"The Aberrants"

Your editorial, "The Aberrants," (March 17) was a clean, scholarly report on the homosexual as a security risk. Their weird lust makes them easy victims of blackmail by subversive conspiracies. But The Washington Post properly condemns blackmailing them in turn for unprincipled political ends.

The conduct of Senator McCarthy poses the larger danger to our national security from perversion. The vilest form of perversion need not be homosexuality. Its symbol can be a former judge who perverts every ideal of our legal code. To hold that past association with those on an ex post facto blacklist is prima facie evidence of disloyalty is weirdest judicial perversion.

Republican Gains Under Lodge-Gossett

Prof. F. A. Hermens of the University of Notre Dame raised some interesting questions in his communication of February 20 concerning the Lodge-Gossett amendment. One of the most interesting is whether the proposed amendment favors the Democratic Party at the expense of the Republican.

The fear has been expressed by certain Republicans that they stand to pick up few votes in the so-called Solid South. Yet, although voting under the present system which makes it practically impossible for the Republicans to get electoral votes in the South, the Republicans polled some 1,361,742 popular votes in the South in 1948. These votes ranged from 2.6 percent of the vote of Mississippi to 41 percent of the vote of Virginia. The inducement of having their votes for President actually count toward the election of a President, as they would under the Lodge-Gossett amendment, would undoubtedly increase the Republican popular vote in the South.

Some Republicans express the fear that they would lose more electoral votes in the North than than they would gain in the South. The Republicans have no area comparable to the Democratic Solid South in which they stand to lose votes to the Democrats. Under the Lodge-Gossett amendment the Republicans would stand to gain in both the Solid South and in the Republican North and West.

There is just one State, Vermont, which has voted Republican in all 16 elections from 1888 through 1948. Maine has voted Republican 15 times during the same period. Four States have voted Republican 12 times: Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, and Pennsylvania. Three have voted Republican in 11 of the 16 elections: New Hampshire, Oregon, and South Dakota. Yet the combined electoral vote of the nine States is only 99 compared to the South's 127. Add Connecticut, Delaware, Kansas, Nebraska, and North Dakota as States in which the Republicans stand a good chance of winning, and the Republican electoral vote would still be only 120 to the South's 127.

During the past five elections constituting the New Deal era the Republicans would have made out very well under a system of proportional representation applied to the electoral college. Using just whole votes, rather than the decimal-fraction votes contemplated under the Lodge-Gossett amendment, in 1932 the Republicans would have gained 21 votes in the South and a net gain of 2 in the Republican States enumerated above for a total gain of 23. In 1936 they would have gained 20 Southern votes and 51 in the Republican States for a total gain of 71; in 1940, 23 votes gain in the South and a loss of 9 in the Republican States, a net gain of 14; in 1944, a 29-vote gain in the South and a 13-vote gain in the Republican States for a net gain of 42. An additional Democratic loss in the South of 5 votes to Byrd, Independent Democrat, would have been an indirect Republican gain.

In 1948 the Republicans would have gained 31 votes in the South and lost 50 in the normally Republican States, a net loss of 19 votes. But the States Rights ticket in the South would have taken another 29 Democratic votes in the South under either the present or a PR system. Ten States Rights votes reclaimed by the Democrats under a PR system would have been offset by a similar loss in other Southern States.

During the five New Deal elections Republicans have only carried a total of 46 States while the Democrats have carried 190 States. During this period the combined Nation-wide electoral vote has been just 437 out of a possible 2655. But under a whole-vote PR distribution of electoral votes, giving results quite similar to the decimal-vote Lodge-Gossett amendment, the Republicans would have received not 437 votes but 1041. On a direct ratio between the popular vote and the electoral vote they would have been entitled to 1125 votes, an under-representation of only 84 votes in five elections compared with an under-representation of 688 votes under the present system.

The actual combined Democratic electoral vote for the five New Deal elections has been 2179 electoral votes. The Democratic popular vote only entitled the party to 1457 votes, showing that the present electoral system has given them an over-representation of 722 electoral votes. Under a whole-vote PR system, the Democrats would have secured only 1547 votes, a net over-representation for the five elections of only 86 votes compared to the 722 under the present system.

Crowded Houses

BIRTH AND building statistics are now pushing further into the distance that cherished human dream—a room of one's own.

For now it appears that families are really getting larger, while living space gets smaller. For a time it was assumed that the high wartime and postwar birth rate was caused almost entirely by the high marriage rate. There were simply more families being started, hence more one- and two-child households.

But now as Ewan Clague, Commissioner of Labor Statistics points out, the number of marriages in 1949 slipped back to the 1940 level, while births surged ahead, being one million over 1940 and topped only by the record year of 1947.

Mr. Clague sees a trend toward three or four children to a family. And recently Prof. Joseph S. Davis, director of the Food Research Institute of Leland, Stanford University, attributed the high birth rate of the last 10 years to economic prosperity, and predicted that barring war or serious depression it would continue.

This would seem to emphasize the need for the three-bedroom dream house, about which much was heard when the present era of family life first got under way. But building costs soon dissolved that hope.

Even the garden type apartments, according to Federal Housing Administration figures for this area, show only 4 percent having three bedrooms, while 60 percent have two bedrooms and 36 percent one bedroom. The separate dwelling that the average young couple can afford to buy or rent usually has one or two bedrooms.

NEW close-in elevator apartments seem to be specializing in cubicle "efficiencies" on a Lilliputian scale. Back in the 1920s there was widespread astonishment by a Nation used to fairly large houses over the size of "kitchenettes." Yet these now seem spacious beside those of the "efficiencies" of today. True these are designed for individuals, or at most couples, but their doll-size dimensions symbolize how Americans are being increasingly crowded for elbow room.

Yet Americans have a tradition and background of "wide open spaces." But nearly everywhere they find themselves being jostled. Just the other day a population study warned the Western Coastal States of the great influx of new settlers they could expect in the next 10 years and how this would mean "less elbow room" for everyone.

Moreover, larger families in small houses and apartments mean tensions. Neuroses, divorces and delinquencies develop out of crowded living quarters. Oscar Stonovrov, architect, warns of the "cold war between generations for possession of the house." This is bad enough when it goes on merely between parents and children. But with an increasing number of elderly people, there are bound to be many households in which three generations compete for space.

MANY FAMILIES in their search for breathing room are becoming what the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics calls "rurbanites." These live near cities or small farms, and either commute to work in town or are retired and do part-time farming. About one-fifth of farm land is so owned. However, both these and the suburbanites generally have to depend on nature to give them rooms of their own. The three-bedroom house—the minimum requirement for the household with several children or several generations—is often beyond their means.

How then are families that need larger houses to get them? The best hope is a long range one, depending on Government research on a large scale to find means to cut housing costs. As Public Health officials recently pointed out, there is more research now on how to build the perfect hog house than on homes for American families.

In the last 50 years the average American home has steadily shrunk. Yet there is greater need now for it to be a castle of psychological refuge than ever before. But a home cannot be a sanctuary if it is bulging at the seams with people, or is so designed that every occupant cannot find some space no matter how small to call his own. Taking stock of population trends, Americans should be demanding that their famed technology move in on this dilemma.

Movie Investigation

With reference to Senator Johnson's remarkable outburst about the motion picture industry: In 1933 the Nazis decreed by law that compulsory application would be required for membership in the Reich's Chamber of Culture. This applied to newspaper editors and, in fact, to every person producing or distributing "cultural products." The Nazi reason was to attempt to starve out or damage Jews and others politically or philosophically unreliable from the Nazi point of view.

Senator Johnson has left open the very serious question as to whether or not his peculiar prejudices are following the Nazi pattern, knowingly or unknowingly. It is a strange case and merits a good deal of study and investigation! H. J. M.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Preface To Diplomacy

IN THE minds of those who favor and of those who oppose a "Truman-Stalin meeting"—which is shorthand for USA-USSR negotiation—there is a common and basic idea. It is that the destiny of the world will be determined by Washington and Moscow.

Lippmann

This is, I believe, the great postwar illusion. The idea was plausible enough in 1945 and for the two or three years thereafter when the other victors were exhausted and the defeated nations were prostrate. But the idea that there are only two world capitals is rapidly becoming a crude exaggeration of Soviet and of American power and a grave underestimate of the purposes and forces of the many other peoples of the world.

The reason why a Truman-Stalin meeting must fail is in the last analysis that Truman and Stalin lack the power, even if they had the will, to settle the future of mankind. Each is the head of a strong state. But they are not the masters of the world, and the other large states and peoples of Europe and Asia will be principals, not pawns, satellites, clients, dependents, in the shaping of events.

TO RECOGNIZE this as the reality and to work accordingly is, I believe, the beginning of a sound and effective diplomacy. The Germans and the Japanese, the Indians and the Chinese, the Turks and the Pakistanis have a part to play in the world which cannot be determined for them in Moscow and in Washington (or even in London-Paris-and-Washington). In the reshaping of our foreign policy, which is now urgent and unavoidable, the preface to all planning and policy making is to clear our minds of the notion and of the unconscious assumption that Asia and most of Europe are the stakes of a diplomatic struggle between Russia and America. There are, of course, dependent and weak countries. But there are also great peoples, however disorganized and poor, who by the weight of their numbers and their vitality and their traditions, must be regarded—because that is what they are or soon will be—as principal and sovereign powers.

The United States and the USSR cannot negotiate about them but only with them. When we accept that conclusion the frozen policies of the cold war will begin to unfreeze. Not negotiation between Truman and Stalin but the reappearance of independent powers, who have the energy and the will to take their own course, will break the deadlock of the present two-power system.

WHETHER the breaking of that deadlock will be favorable to our interests and to the general cause of national freedom and of peace is the crucial question to which our new diplomacy must find the answer. It could happen that the non-Communist coalition would break up first, and in such a way as to draw Germany and Japan and much else besides into the Soviet orbit. Such a catastrophe is likely to happen, I think, if we are unable to propose to Germany and to Japan a place in the world which gives them the prospect of security and a position of independence and of national self-respect.

We have not yet done that, and I believe we shall never do it if we continue to think of western Germany and Japan as the military outposts of the Western alliance, and of the Germans and the Japanese as subordinate members of our coalition and the objects of our philanthropy. The Germans and the Japanese will not for long willingly accept such a dangerous and undignified role, and somehow or other they will try something else.

IF THEY cannot be integrated into an anti-Communist coalition, if they cannot be permitted to enter the Soviet coalition, then they must go toward independence and unentanglement. In my view that is the general line of policy which, within the limits of our power and influence, has the best prospects and the smallest risks.

It is not possible for us to organize a global coalition. Those among us who want to do that are, I contend, miscalculating our power and are misunderstanding the complications and the resistance of the many nations they would like to organize. It would be intolerable, on the other hand, if the Soviet Union succeeded in forming a coalition which included, along with China, also Germany and Japan. Our true line therefore is to see to it that the national forces which prevent us from organizing a coalition are able also to prevent the Russians from organizing their coalition. That was not a feasible policy as long as Germany and Japan were prostrate. But as they are reviving, it is no longer an impossible line of policy.

WE SHOULD, therefore—of course after careful deliberation on the concrete terms—take our stand firmly and unequivocably for peace treaties with Germany and Japan. We should stand for the re-unification of a German state committed by the treaty of peace and its own constitution to a policy of military neutrality, akin to that of Switzerland and Sweden, and within the United Nations. We should offer the end of the controls and of the occupation when the new German state has a German police and militia which it considers loyal and efficient in maintaining internal order and its own authority.

We should offer Japan peace with military neutrality. We should look to Japan and to India as the leading powers of Asia in finding a modus vivendi with Red China which will give to China an alternative to complete dependence on Moscow.

WE SHOULD take this general line hoping sincerely that the Russians will find it acceptable eventually as a basis for co-existence. But we should not regard Russian acceptance as the condition of our taking this general line. It is by taking it that we shall release new powerful forces in Europe and Asia that will change the situation—in ways that the Russians may have to accept even if they do not think them altogether acceptable.

Price Reduced On Heating Oil

The local consumer price of No. 2 heating oil—the type usually used in home furnaces—has been set at 11.2 cents a gallon, industry sources said yesterday.

This is four-tenths of a cent more than the new price of 10.8 cents established in Baltimore. The extra cost, the industry said, is to cover cost of transportation.

The price in both cities has been cut four-tenths of a cent a gallon.

White House Aide Enters Law Firm

Philip F. Maguire, former White House aide, has entered private law practice here, it was announced yesterday.

Maguire resigned last month as assistant to John R. Steelman, assistant to the President. He has formed a partnership with Arthur M. Becker and David Reich, specializing in administrative law work. The firm, Becker, Maguire & Reich is located at 839 17th st. nw.

New Appointments

By Marquis Childs

Organizing The Nation's Resources

ONE THING President Truman has been doing during his so-called vacation in Florida is to work out a series of appointments to important Government offices that have too long been vacant. These steps have been urgently needed if the United States was in reality to conduct "total diplomacy" in a cold war.

Childs

The President has worked out these steps in consultation over the weekend, they are unrelated to Secretary Acheson and the State Department.

A kind of package deal is being devised to provide a series of appointments that will greatly strengthen the Administration if they do finally go through. At the present stage of negotiations these three appointments seem to be fairly firm:

W. Stuart Symington, now Secretary of the Air Force, to be chairman of the National Security Resources Board. Symington has been Air Secretary since unification, serving under the late James Forrestal and for the past year under Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson.

Thomas K. Finletter, until recently administrator of ECA aid in London, to succeed Symington as Secretary for Air. Finletter served as chairman of the President's Air Policy Commission. That commission in 1947 and '48 wrote a comprehensive report on all phases of aviation in this country, both military and civil. The report approved a 70-group Air Force.

Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War during World War II and later Secretary of War, to be chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission. Patterson spent the past 10 days in Washington in consultation with Government officials.

OF THE three the last is still in the doubtful category. Patterson denies that he intends returning to Government. He has been deeply reluctant to leave his New York law practice. But it is believed here that in the end he may be persuaded.

The chairmanship of the National Security Resources Board has been vacant for nearly a year and a half. This is theoretically a top and vital planning agency. The President named as chairman in February of 1949 his old friend, former Gov. Mon Wallgren of the State of Washington. President Truman explained at that time that he wanted in the chairmanship of this important agency a friend with whom he could speak intimately and confidentially.

The Senate, with Senator Harry Byrd of Virginia helping to block the appointment, refused to confirm Wallgren, who was later named to a place on the Federal Power Commission Since that time Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman has been acting chairman. But his has been a far-from-satisfactory situation. The other members are all Cabinet officers—State, Treasury, Defense, Interior, Agriculture, Commerce and Labor—with many demands on their time from their own departments.

FINLETTER has been a partner in Coudert Bros., a large Manhattan law firm, since he left Washington in 1944. From 1941 to '44 he was Special Assistant to the Secretary of State. Representative Frederick R. Coudert, jr., New York City Republican, is a partner in the Coudert firm.

While Finletter is generally regarded as a Republican, partisan politics have played little or no part in his Government service. He went to England for ECA in 1948 with the rank of Minister and served for a year.

Patterson first came to Washington to serve under President Roosevelt in July of 1940, the most critical phase of the phony war. His advent coincided with that of two other Republicans, the late Frank Knox, who became Secretary of the Navy, and Henry L. Stimson, who accepted the post of Secretary of War. Patterson became Undersecretary of War in December of 1940.

There is, in a sense, something symbolic about the prospective return of men who served their time in that other war. Fair Dealers will not be made happy by it, just as New Dealers were not happy over who came to Washington with them.

But if there is to be any real and meaningful organization of the Nation's resources for peace and/or war, then some such step as this is essential. An organization that exists for the most part on the law books and the facade of a telephone number is no organization at all. Here is action that has long been imperative if the world crisis is half as grave as we have been led to believe.

Greater Separation of Powers Between NLRB, Counsel Urged

An architect of the Taft-Hartley Act yesterday urged greater separation of powers between the National Labor Relations Board and its general counsel as a means of ending the confusion in the NLRB.

Gerard B. Reilly, Washington labor relations attorney and former member of the NLRB, suggested this step before the House Committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments.

The suggestion is directly contrary to what President Truman wants to do about the confusion of powers in the NLRB. Under Reorganization Plan No. 12 he wants to abolish the presently independent office of NLRB general counsel and transfer its prosecuting functions to the five-man board and its chairman.

Criticizes Truman Plan

The President's plan would result in more, rather than less confusion, declared Reilly, who although he represents a number of the Nation's major industrial firms said he was speaking as an individual with long experience in administrative law.

Under the present system of separation of powers—the prosecuting functions controled by the general counsel and the judicial functions handled by the board—the NLRB is at best a year behind in catching up with its logjam of cases, Reilly said.

By adding the prosecuting functions to the duties of the board, the NLRB will be overwhelmed with confusion and delay, Reilly argued.

Reilly, who as special counsel to the Senate Labor Committee helped write the Taft-Hartley management-labor relations act of 1947, said his views on the reorganization issue had nothing to do with the "feud" between Robert Denham, NLRB general counsel, and Paul Herzog, board chairman, over their respective jurisdictions. Reilly said he would be for clearer separation of the prosecuting and judicial functions even were Herzog and Denham holding one another's positions in the board.

Another witness testifying to the pro-management view of the President's reorganization plan, G. Maynard Smith, a labor relations attorney in Atlanta, Ga., questioned the legality of the plan to abolish the general counsel's office on the ground that the change, by executive order, would in effect amend the Taft-Hartley Act.

In the questioning of witnesses and accompanying debate, Representative Chet Holifield (D., Calif.) and Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr. (Lib.-Dem., N. Y.), defended the Administration's argument that the Reorganization Plan would end confusion in the NLRB.

Thus far only witnesses opposing the plan have been heard in two days of hearings. Although scores of persons have asked for the right to testify at the hearing, Chairman William L. Dawson (D., Ill.) plans to end the hearings by the end of the week in order to have a committee vote and report ready for the House by Wednesday. A vote on the issue is expected Thursday or Friday of next week.

Facing Time Limit

Reason for the rush lies in the Reorganization Act of 1949. This law provides that any reorganization plan of executive departments by the President shall take effect in 60 days unless either chamber of Congress specifically rejects the plan. The act also empowers the sponsor of the rejection resolution to call up the resolution on the floor of the chamber 10 calendar days after the resolution is tossed into the hopper.

House Resolution 516, sponsored by Rep. Clare E. Hoffman (R., Mich.), was filed Monday, and therefore must be acted upon by the committee by Wednesday.

The committee originally had planned to have its report ready by Saturday, to meet the deadline of the resolution introduced by Rep. Ralph E. Church (R., Ill.). Church collapsed and died Tuesday while testifying on his resolution. The similar Hoffman resolution was then substituted and the hearings continued.

City Heads Oppose Assessments Refund Measure

The District Commissioners yesterday told Congress they are opposed to a bill that might cost the District up to $3,500,000 for repayment of old street-paving assessments.

Commissioner John Russell Young wrote Senate District Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.), that the bill was like a number of others considered in earlier Congresses. Their purpose is to make the District refund assessments that were paid in cases where like assessments were voided by the courts.

Two decisions by the Court of Appeals here in the '20s voided parts of the street paving assessment laws of the preceding decade, Young explained.

Great Lakes Shipping Officials Condemn Use of Hiring Halls

A Great Lakes shipping company official said yesterday that the union hiring hall system for seamen has led to a "breakdown of discipline" aboard American ships on the lakes.

Capt. L. M. Jonassen, president of Cleveland Tankers, Inc., made the statement before the Senate Labor Committee. He said that under the system of assigning only union members to ships the seamen depend upon union membership rather than ability to hold their jobs.

Jonassen was urging continuation of the Taft-Hartley ban on hiring halls. He said it would be in the interest of efficiency as well as discipline.

With hiring halls, he said, ship operators are helpless to prevent "drunkards, trouble makers and incompetents" from being assigned to vessels. He added:

"In the last analysis, the American merchant marine is one of our first lines of defense in a national emergency and on the competency of its crews may conceivably rest our salvation or defeat as a nation."

The committee is making a general study of the hiring hall system in view of a recent court decision outlawing it under the Taft-Hartley Act.

Jonassen said he was speaking primarily from his experience with the CIO National Maritime Union.

Jonassen was backed up by other representatives of Great Lakes shipping companies.

D. A. Wright, president of the Lake Tankers Corp., said the hiring hall system "has served no purpose but to perpetuate the inefficiency of union personnel and to continue in one of our vital industries the closed shop which the Taft-Hartley Act declared illegal."

Thomas B. Mann, vice president of the Great Lakes Transport Corp. contended a union shop, authorized under certain conditions by the Taft-Hartley Act, would give the maritime unions just as much security as the hiring hall system.

Brookings Hits U. S. Old-Age Security Setup

By The Associated Press

A Brookings Institution official yesterday hung tags of "thoroughly unsound" and "financially reckless" on the Federal Social Security program. He urged a pay-as-you-go system.

Lewis Meriam, vice president of the foundation that carries on research in Government, told the Senate Finance Committee the old age and survivors insurance program is "socially questionable." From a public finance standpoint, he testified, it is "thoroughly unsound."

The committee is studying a bill passed last year by the House to widen the coverage of the present Social Security Act.

Calling the present program "financially reckless," Merian said:

"Our old age and survivors insurance system saddles future generations with a tremendous commitment for benefit payments in addition to other costs of Government. The safe course is to adopt a true pay-as-you-go system, giving such benefits as are reasonable and within our present economic ability, paying the costs each year, and trusting future generations to do likewise."

He said the Government has no "contractual obligation" to continue the present system.

"It should make fundamental revision now, before the present benefits are readjusted to offset the change in the cost of living," he added. The present offers an opportunity to shift to a financially sound system that may not come again."

He said the law should provide benefits immediately for all persons in need because of old age or permanent disability, with the money to be obtained through "a flat-rate universal individual income tax without exemptions."

The levy, he added, should be high enough to pay expenses of the program year by year. And he said the money should be earmarked for this purpose.

The committee also received a statement from Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin giving his indorsement of a liberalization and extension of the Social Security program.

School Aid Issue Revived By Spellman

New York, March 22 (AP).—Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, spoke out again today against the Federal school-aid bill introduced last year by Representative Graham Barden (D., N. C.).

Spellman, who arrived aboard the Atlantic after after a Holy Year pilgrimage to Rome, said the law would keep Catholic children "off public transportation facilities" financed by the Government.

"Tomorrow they will try to keep us out of the public libraries, the public gardens and perhaps off the sidewalks if they continue to use the same logic that they are using in the matter of bus transportation," Spellman said.

The Barden bill prevents the use of Federal funds for parochial schools.

The Cardinal's remarks were prompted by a speech Barden made in New York this month criticizing Spellman's stand.

Last July, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Archbishop got in a verbal controversy when the wife of the late President stated that under the principle of separation of church and state, church schools should not get Federal money.

At that time Spellman wrote Mrs. Roosevelt accusing her of being "anti-Catholic" and guilty of "discrimination unworthy of an American mother."

During Spellman's absence, Representative Barden told a conference here on the Federal aid to public education that "the Cardinal made the very erroneous decision that the way to get me, and those of like convictions, out of his way, was to apply ugly names."

The following day, the Right Rev. Msgr. John S. Middleton, New York archdiocesan secretary for education, reiterated Spellman's assertion that the Catholic church does not seek public funds for general support of parochial schools, for maintenance, building repair, construction or teachers' salaries.

District Bar Slates Series On Training

The District Bar Association will conduct its first "institute for the practical training of lawyers" in a daylong session Friday, starting in the Mayflower Hotel.

Subject of the first program—part of a Nation-wide series—will be "Organizational Problems of Small Business."

James D. Mann, executive secretary of the District Bar Association, emphasized that the program is open to all lawyers regardless of membership in the local bar. He urged those planning to attend to send promptly the $5 registration fee to him at the District Bar Association office, 1044 Washington Building, Washington, D. C. Three leading lawyers will head the Friday discussion.

South American Indians Develop New Brew—Yocco

Something new in stimulant drinks has been reported to the Smithsonian Institution here. It's a drink called Yocco.

Dr. Richard E. Schultes, an Agriculture Department plant explorer, now working along the Amazon River in South America, sent specimens of a vine to the Smithsonian's national herbarium. From its bark, Dr. Schultes said, native Indians brew the Yocco, which is nonintoxicating, with high caffeine content.

"A tingling of the fingers and a general feeling of well-being are noticeable 10 minutes after drinking it," Dr. Schultes reported.

Don't form a line for a sample. The Smithsonian said it will not go into the business of raising the vine and brewing the drink. No Yocco bar, now or later.

Budget Hearing Set In Prince Georges

Prince Georges County's assessable base has increased 25 million dollars, the County Commissioners revealed yesterday in setting April 12 for a public hearing on the proposed budget for the county.

The hearing will be held at 10 a. m. at the Courthouse in Upper Marlboro. It was set on a Wednesday in order not to conflict with the regular Tuesday business session of the commissioners.

The commissioners did not reveal the budget total nor the tax rate expected to be set, pointing out that these will be determined after the public hearing. Tentative figures are expected to be ready next Tuesday. Copies of the proposed budget will be ready for distribution after Tuesday, Linden Briscoe, clerk to the board announced.

Harry W. McNamee, president of the Board of County Commissioners, revealed that the county's assessable base now is $220,223,620 as against $195,109,620 for the past year. The approximately 25 million increase would realize about one half million dollars at the present tax rate of $1.97.

McNamee intimated that this would permit the commissioners to retain the tax rate somewhere in the same neighborhood but refused to make any definite statement prior to the public hearing.

The budget for last year was $3,842,675.51.

Mrs. Norton's Successor on Unit Named

Mrs. Chase Going Woodhouse (D., Conn.) was named yesterday to succeed Mrs. Mary T. Norton (D., N. J.) as a member of the congressional conference committee on the Hatch Act revision bill.

Mrs. Norton resigned from the conference group. After three weeks in the Naval Medical Hospital following an attack of pneumonia, Mrs. Norton returned yesterday to her apartment in the Kennedy-Warren, her office said.

Mrs. Woodhouse's appointment clears the way for early resumption of the conferences on the bill. She said she was familiar generally with the legislation, but not ready to comment.

One section of the bill would let Federal workers in Washington suburbs participate in local party politics, instead of participating only as "independents" under present Civil Service rules.

Independent groups, particularly in Arlington County, oppose the change as a blow at their organizations. This and other differences between the House and Senate versions of the bill will be taken up by the conference group.

Other conferees include Senators John C. Stenis (D., Miss.), Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa.), and Andrew F. Schoeppel (R., Kans.) and Representatives Burr P. Harrison (D., Va.) and Karl M. LeCompte (R., Iowa). Senate aides indicated the conference group will probably meet next week.

Kestner to Head Nearby Virginia Road District

Charles W. Kestner, Virginia State Highway Department personnel engineer, will take over the Culpeper highway construction district, it was announced yesterday.

Kestner

Succeeding D. I. Mount, who will be transferred to the Fredericksburg district, Kestner will administer some 6275 miles of roads in Albemarle, Arlington, Culpeper, Fairfax, Fauquier, Fluvanna, Green, Louisa, Loudoun, Madison, Orange, Prince William and Rappahannock counties.

A native of Saltville, in Washington County, Kestner has been with the highway department since 1923 and has served all over the State. He has been personnel engineer since 1948.

Transit Fare Hike Hearing April 4

A public hearing on Capital Transit Co.'s request for a fare increase will be held April 4, the District Public Utilities Commission announced yesterday.

It is scheduled for 10 a. m. in the District Building board room.

The requested increase would raise cash fares to 15 cents, token fares to six for 80 cents and would eliminate the $1.75 weekly pass. Cash fares are now 13 cents, and tokens three for 35 cents.

Timing of Rest Periods Urged as Aid in Fighting Tuberculosis

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Tuberculosis patients might recover faster if they were forced to punch timeclocks, a Virginia hospital executive said yesterday.

The timing, however, should be of rest periods, not of work hours, he hastened to explain.

Thomas Williams, executive assistant chief of the tuberculosis section, Veterans Administration Hospital, Richmond, Va., made the suggestion at the annual spring meeting of the Metropolitan Washington Tuberculosis Conference, at the Federal Security Building here.

Despite modern medicine's advances against tuberculosis, the speaker said, no substitute treatment for plenty of rest has been found.

"Rest is the only secure treatment against tuberculosis, and it's the only secure preventive against tuberculosis," Williams declared.

Punching regular work timeclocks at the start and end of rest periods, he explained, would impress the patient, and better educate him to the value of complete rest periods.

Earlier at the same conference, Dr. Monroe J. Romanski, associate professor of medicine at George Washington University School of Medicine, told how doctors are getting maximum benefits and minimum side effects out of the antibiotic, streptomycin.

Just by reducing the dosage, Dr. Romanski said, the doctors find they can get about the same anti-tuberculosis action from streptomycin, with far fewer side effects as loss of the sense of balance and loss in hearing.

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, District Health Officer, told the conference that city officials well know the need for at least 400 more tuberculosis beds here. But just how they can be obtained, and how soon, are "unanswerable questions of today and the forseeable future," he declared.

Attending the one-day conference were several hundred delegates from the District and adjoining counties and local and State tuberculosis control officers from Maryland and Virginia.

Prowler Threatens To Strangle Women

A pre-dawn bedroom prowler threatened to strangle two sleeping women in adjacent apartment buildings yesterday but fled when they screamed for help.

Both women suffered face scratches in their struggles with the man, who slipped through a window in each apartment within a matter of minutes.

They are Miss Mae Mooney, 40, of 2524 17th st. nw., and Mrs. Arline Brown, 31, of 2526 17th st. nw., mother of four young children.

Miss Mooney, a Civil Service telephone operator who lives alone in a first-floor apartment, said the man shined a flashlight in her eyes and grabbed her throat as she lay sleeping.

"I fought with him and he banged his hand over my face, apparently trying to put the sheet in my mouth," she recalled.

"He dropped the flashlight on the bed and grabbed me by the throat," she said. "I hit him with my left hand and began screaming. He ran out the front door, leaving the flashlight behind."

She then called police.

Mrs. Brown, a hostess at the Roger Smith Hotel, said the man apparently fled from Miss Mooney's apartment and climbed into her bedroom window.

"He told me to keep quiet or he would kill me," Mrs. Brown said but she struggled and began screaming. One of her four children heard the noise and started crying, and the man escaped through the same window by which he entered. Two of the children were asleep in cribs by her bed.

Her husband, John Brown, an American Cab driver, was working at the time, which she recalled as about 5 a. m.

Mrs. Brown described her assailant as a Negro, about 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighing about 160 pounds, and wearing a sweater.

Writer, State Dept. Man, Disagree on Arms Aid for Non-Red Asia

A State Department official and a foreign correspondent differed at a forum here yesterday over the question of arming non-Communist Asia.

Speaking to the United Nations Forum at the Shoreham Hotel, Deputy Undersecretary of State Dean Rusk said "peace and freedom in Asia are not primarily military problems" but "basically the job is one of construction of democratic institutions."

Edgar Ansell Mowrer, long-time correspondent, however, said that unless non-Communist Asia receives military support from the United States it can be, and probably will be taken over by "a 10 percent minority" of Communists.

Mowrer said Indo-China, Burma and Tibet all are "terribly menaced" today. He said we have "risked force" in Greece and Berlin without war with Russia and "there is no more chance of war in Asia than in Europe."

Rusk said "our own example" is of the greatest possible importance. He added that "our torch of liberty doesn't shine quite so brightly outside this country as we think."

Admiral Oscar Badger, formerly in command of the Asiatic Fleet, acted as moderator. Mrs. Charles F. Brannan is chairman of the forum. Yesterday's program was the first of four on Asia.

AAA Offers 10 Training Cars to D. C.

The American Automobile Association has carried its fight for a driver training program in every senior high school here to Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Washington I. Cleveland, AAA District manager, last night made public a letter to the Senator reaffirming the association's offer to loan District school system 10 new dual-control training cars at no charge if Congress appropriates $39,300 for additional teachers.

School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning also has urged the Commissioners to seek congressional approval of the extra driver training funds, but the Commissioners did not include the funds in the fiscal 1951 budget sent to Congress last January.

Both Cleveland and Corning went before the House and Senate Appropriations Committees, asking reinstatement of the $39,300 increase.

For some time funds have been allowed for driver training teachers in only four senior high schools. The school system now owns two dual-control autos for teaching purposes and the AAA is donating two others.

In his letter to O'Mahoney, Cleveland said he was writing to "ask your assistance in securing the restoration of this tiem of $39,300 in the D. C. Appropriation bill."

D. C. to Accept 2-Car Parking Meter Bids

The District Commissioners yesterday reversed themselves and decided to accept parking meter bids from companies whose product meters two cars instead of one.

Last fall when bids were sought on 750 meters, low bidder was a firm producing "twin" meters. George E. Keneipp, director of vehicles and traffic, felt they would confuse drivers. On his recommendation all bids were rejected and the specifications ordered rewritten to specify that twin meter companies could not bid on District contracts.

However, after the company and its Congressman, Representative W. Sterling Cole (R., N. Y.), asked that opportunity be given to prove the worth of the product, the Commissioners ordered a study made.

Happy Is The Day When Backache Goes Away . . . .
As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.
If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

World Church Council Seen Winning Out

Buck Hill Falls, Pa., March 22 (AP).—Despite attacks, interest is growing among American churches in the World Council of Churches, an official of the organization said today.

Dr. Henry Smith Leiper, associate general secretary of the council, made the statement to delegates attending the opening of the annual United States conference here.

Dr. Leiper said the attacks come from "misinformed economic conservatives" and "Communist sympathizers."

The Right Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Washington, D. C., stressed a need to bring the program of the World Council into the "main channels of the church."

Lane to Sign Sothoron Bill, Prince Georges Leaders Told

Maryland Governor W. Preston Lane, jr., informed Prince Georges County civic leaders yesterday that he will sign the Sothoron Bill for reorganization of the county government.

Walter F. Mulligan, of Berwyn, president of the county Civic Federation, received a letter from the governor yesterday in which the governor said he feels constrained to sign the bill to avoid governmental disruption in the county.

Lane wrote that he conferred with the attorney general concerning the bill after receiving a letter from Mulligan urging a public hearing.

Among those who wrote or wired the State House requesting a hearing on the bill were Irma Bogdonoff, president of the Prince Georges County League of Women Voters; William R. Turner, president of the Chillum Civic Association, and the Prince Georges County Civic Federation.

"This bill affirmatively states that an acute emergency exists with respect to the administrative machinery of the government of Prince Georges County," Lane wrote.

"Under the circumstances, I find it impossible to see how, without authority of this bill, any County Commissioners can be elected in Prince Georges County this fall and I do not believe the existing County Commissioners could be held over in their terms of office.

The Sothoron Bill provides that the County Commissioners elect one of their members as a fulltime commissioner to act as executive officer in supervising the county departments. It also provides for creation of necessary county departments by the County Commissioners and for publication of budget matter and creation of a purchasing agent. The laws of the county would continue to be enacted by the General Assembly but the commissioners will have more latitude in promulgating ordinances.

housebreaking, and petty larceny convictions, prior to his employment and arrests for investigation and disorderly conduct since, the court was told. He holds an honorable discharge from the Army.

Government Charge

The Government charges that last November, Kinard sold a case of streptomycin for $175 to Dr. Alvin G. Thornton, of 4832 Deane ave. ne. The physician notified police who began investigating the case.

At police headquarters, the chlormycetin was found in Kinard's coat, Detective Sergt. William Taylor said.

Dr. West, who has been at the hospital for 21 years, was called as the first defense witness. He said that he was "shocked" at the charge against Kinard who had a reputation of being "very honest."

On cross - examination, McLaughlin's first question to West was:

"Mr. West, is it not a fact that you have done everything in your power and authority to prevent police from investigating this case?"

"This is the first I have heard about that," Dr. West replied.

Questioning Allowed

Defense Attorney Thomas Ahern objected heatedly, but Judge Goldsborough allowed the line of questioning to continue.

Dr. West acknowledged that he had "lost" a letter which had been sent to him by Wyeth, Inc., manufacturers of the drugs, which might have traced the drug sold to Dr. Thornton back to the hospital. He said that he had the letter on his desk at one time but could not find it when needed. He reasoned that he did not keep it in a file because he lacked a secretary.

Finally when Ahern persisted in his objections as to questions asked Dr. West, the judge said: "With this witness, the court doesn't think anything improper has been done."

Mother Retrieves Baby Girl, Calls GPO Worker Kidnaper

A kidnaping charge was placed against a 22-year-old Government Printing Office employe yesterday after he snatched a 9-month-old baby from its mother's arms and fled in a cab, police reported.

Police said the man, James Perry, 72 H st. nw., called on the mother, Mrs. Ruby Mayhew, 19, of 223 Massachusetts ave. nw., as she visited with her sister, Sadie Rankin, in the latter's apartment at 1623 Kalorama rd. nw.

Mrs. Mayhew told police that Perry struck her, grabbed the baby from her arms and escaped in a taxi as they emerged from the apartment at 2:45 p. m.

The mother led 13th Precinct Plainclothesmen Arthur J. Sweeney and Gerald Culley to the 800 block 1st st. nw., where they found Perry walking down the street with the child, Linda, tucked under his coat, police said.

A lookout had been broadcast for the baby, described as being clad in blue overalls, red coat and hat, and having light skin, brown hair and gray eyes.

BUICK PRICES BEGIN AT $1886.00 DELIVERED
Optional equipment, state and local taxes, if any, additional. Prices may vary slightly in adjoining communities due to shipping charges.

LET's be completely down-to-earth on the matter.

If you're thinking about a new car this year, you probably have a certain make in mind.

You may have an idea of its price which seems to fit your budget — and the easy way is to stop right there.

Now we don't want to put you to extra bother, sir — but have you got Buick's delivered prices too?

Did you know they start just above the very lowest, run under those on many sixes?

Did you know that every Buick power plant is a valve-in-head straight-eight (which makes it 10% more efficient to start with) — and a high-compression Fireball engine to boot?

Have you figured that every Buick rides on four soft coil springs where most other cars use only two?

That each has a ride-steadying torque-tube drive, where common practice is to drive through the springs, which means they have to be stiffer?

Have you looked at the room in a Buick — have you tried out the easier parking and handling of its tidy over-all size — have you figured that its bold front end is a protection against high repair costs as well as the most visible style on the highway?

Are you remembering that there are three Buick series — SPECIAL, SUPER and ROADMASTER — each with its own price bracket, and each with its own power plant tailored especially for that series?

Have you sampled Buick's very special ride, compared it with others? Tried out the liquid smoothness of Dynaflow Drive*? Checked the actual records this beauty is piling up on such things as gas and oil economy?

We're well aware that just learning about such things — and more that are equally interesting—may not put you in a Buick.

We do think it's a shame to pay the price of a Buick and not get all it offers.

If you'll just drop in to see us, we'll show you what a glittering array of values that is.

*Standard on ROADMASTER, optional at extra cost on SUPER and SPECIAL models.

Crime Resolution Set for Clearance pilots as they flew into the overcast:

"Where are you?"

"I'm right on top of you."

"Be careful and don't get too close."

Then silence.

Investigators theorized that the planes, flying at estimated speeds of 600 miles an hour, bumped together and then crazily nosed into the earth.

The exploding ships dug crater-like holes in the earth some 200 feet apart. The holes were about 40 feet in circumference and 10 feet deep. Pieces of the planes and parts of the bodies and clothing of the victims were strewn over a quarter-of-a-mile area.

The Kefauver resolution authorizing a sweeping Senate investigation of organized crime is slated for clearance today by the Senate Rules Committee but the Senate may have to decide what group conducts the inquiry.

A subcommittee set up to study a jurisdictional tangle over the bill will recommend funds for the investigation but by-pass the question of what Senate committee should make it.

The resolution authorizing the Judiciary Committee to investigate how "tygoons" operate in interstate commerce was introduced by Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.).

The Senate Judiciary Committee approved the resolution last month and asked the Senate Rules Committee to clear $100,000 from the Senate's contingent fund to make the far-reaching inquiry.

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, headed by Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), promptly challenged the Judiciary Committee's right to make the investigation, and claimed jurisdiction for his own committee.

Johnson argued his group would handle much of the antiracketeering legislation to be recommended by the Justice Department and therefore should conduct the investigation. Kefauver and other members of the Judiciary Committee contended just as strongly that interstate crime and its punishment lies within the jurisdiction of the Judiciary unit.

Senator John C. Stennis (D., Miss.), chairman of the three-man subcommittee set up to look into the tangle, said last night he will report that the Rules group has no authority to settle such a dispute between committees.

"We will report, without prejudice, that it's a wide-open matter," said Stennis. "Subcommittee members reserve the right to vote as they wish if the question is raised on the Senate floor."

The full Rules Committee is expected to adopt the subcommittee report and clear the Kefauver resolution to the Senate today. Whether the committee will approve the full $100,000 asked for the inquiry was still not decided. There were indications request may be pared down, with an understanding that the investigating group can come back for more money if the inquiry justifies.

Emotion in Jewish Songs A Welcome Note at Symphony

By Paul Hume

There was a new note in the National Symphony Orchestra's concert last night.

Howard Mitchell conducted, as usual, and the music was that of a representative Wednesday night. But this was a special event, with a special soloist, and a special reason for being.

It was a concert presented by Adas Israel Congregation of Washington in conjunction with Jewish Music Month, and the local Festival of Jewish Music. Cantor Jacob Barkin of Adas Israel was soloist.

Music was drawn from composers of Jewish background. Mendelssohn's Fourth Symphony was the evening's most substantial offering. But with it stood Camille Saint-Saens' Bacchanale from Samson and Delilah, Milhaud's Suite Francaise, and Georges Enesco's first Roumanian Rhapsody.

Cantor Barkin sang one opera aria, and three traditional Jewish airs. His aria was Eleazar's moving scene from the last act of La Juive by Halevy.

Barkin is a dramatic tenor of power and discerning style. His opera and his moving account of the Hebrew songs was voiced with authority and often splendor. No part of the operatic tenor's range frightens him. He mounts with ease and brilliance to the top B flat with a freedom many singers might envy.

The lower register of his voice occasionally takes on an edge but he was heard through and above the orchestra at every point.

Mitchell and the orchestra gave Barkin polished support both in Halevy and in rich accompaniments provided by Warner Bass' orchestrations. The emotional tone of the Jewish songs was a new and welcome sound in the concert. An encore was required of Barkin, for which he offered "Eili, eili."

The orchestra has been heard in all the music it played but never heard to sound better. After an absence of two weeks, during which it has been on tour, its balance, superb woodwinds, and increasingly solid style returned with fresh beauty.

Adas Israel is to be congratulated for its rare support of music and the National Symphony. Other Washington organizations might consider similar concerts.

One on the Aisle—

'Island' a Barrel Of High-Proof Fun

By Richard L. Coe

"TIGHT LITTLE ISLAND," one of those chucklesome British views of things human and essentially British, is at the Little and the Dupont. Despite its subject, it has a dry, sharp flavor you'll find delightful.

That subject is a tiny, isolated island of the Hebrides off Scotland which, during the war, found itself with no whisky whatever. How a ship laden with tons of the best that cheers founders just offshore, supplies some of the best humor of the year.

Two forces stood between the cases on the ship and the thirsty Scots on land: a persnickety Home Guard captain and the Sabbath. The captain, richly played by Basil Radford, that apoplectic cricketer of "The Lady Vanishes," sees it as his duty to report the wreck's cargo to His Majesty's tax enforcement officers. The good islanders take a dim view of this and go to endless lengths to thwart such nonsense. They've been without even legal liquor long enough and see no reason to look in another direction when Providence solves the insoluble.

But the Sabbath is even more of a hurdle than the eager beaver captain. There is no way around the Sabbath in Scotland, and so we watch the thirsty lining the beach, tongues licking parched lips, eyes on the vessel which may, at any moment, turn turtle into the waves. But come 12:01 a. m. Monday, the Sabbath is over and so is the restraint. They don't get the whole cargo, but before the ship founders, they have enough to hide all over town.

Which brings the Home Guard officer into frenzied activity with his superiors elsewhere and with those whom he views as under his island command. When the tax people land, not a drop's to be found, and the search goes out to the caves near the seacliffs, pirate strongholds practically.

The character reactions have that universal human quality accented by capable writing and shrewd performing: the bombast of the officious captain, puffing for order; the strict, prim attitude of the bony mother of the island schoolteacher, a lieutenant whose thirst prompts him to circumvent his superior—thirst and his love for the daughter of the prime pubkeeper; the captain's patient wife who knows how to delay but not how to stop her busy husband; an old man fading into death until his daily ration is restored.

A Barrel of Fun

The approach of all these wet things is nicely dry. A pontifical commentator takes over at the start to explain the terrible misfortune which overtook the island; what he says and what the camera shows are fitted together with sharp tongue-in-cheek style. The natural look of the islanders and the matter of fact photography add immensely to the effect.

Compton Mackenzie and Angus MacPhail adapted Mackenzie's novel, "Whiskey Galore" (also the film's original title), with the brevity that is wit's soul, and all the performers are grand. You'll especially enjoy Jean Cadell's dour, demanding mother and Gordon Jackson as the schoolteacher son who breaks mother's long-held sway.

Yes, "Tight Little Island" is a barrel of fun.

EDGAR BROOKE, former Timeman now with the State Department, has been informed that his Collier's short story, "Interruptions," will be the first in the group of nine short yarns Metro will release as its contribution to the cycle started by Somerset Maugham's "Quartet" . . . M-G-M will call this collection, "It's a Big Country" . . . Success of the British with unrelated tales in the Maugham triumph has spawned several such, including collections of more Maugham as "Trio" and some Noel Coward pieces . . . Linking devices, such as that for "Tales of Manhattan," will be out.

SIDNEY LUST'S Bethesda Theater will jump the golf season gun today and tomorrow with Golfer Bob Hope as the star of "Sorrowful Jones" and a full hour of golfing shorts, employing such wows as Sam Snead, Ben Hogan, Babe Didrikson, Cary Middlecoff, Lew Worsham and Byron Nelson.

THE MOUNT VERNON Players will repeat their production of Pirandello's "Henry IV" Friday and Saturday nights to make up for postponed performances in their undercroft auditorium, 900 Massauchetts ave.

ROBERT FITZGERALD is one of the week's visitors to Catholic University's speech and drama department, which is giving the translation he and Dudley Fitts have made of "Oedipus Rex." . . . Poet-Newswriter Fitzgerald will be seeing the first public production of this new version of the Sophocles tragedy.

"TIGHT LITTLE ISLAND." Universal-International release for J. Arthur Rank. Screen play by Compton Mackenzie and Angus Macphail from Mackenzie's novel, "Whiskey Galore." Photographed by Gerald Gibbs. Music by Ernest Irving. Directed by Alexander Mackendrick. At the Little and the Dupont.

Loans, Deposits Of S. & L. Units Set New Tops

By S. Oliver Goodman

Five new records were set in March 1 figures of the 27 member associations of the D. C. Building and Loan League, Secretary F. Willson Camp revealed yesterday.

Money on deposit by shareholders hit a new peak of $324,321,158, a gain of five million dollars since January 1.

Assets rose to $373,048,450, an increase of six million.

Loans advanced to $327,852,959 as compared with $326,543,795 at start of the year.

Reserves climbed to $33,899,091, against $33,747,000 on January 1.

Indicating ample funds still available for home loans, cash on hand as of March 1 aggregated 27 million dollars and Government bonds 11 million dollars.

DIVIDENDS: The Hecht Co. voted regular quarterly dividend of 40 cents a common share, payable April 29 to stock of record April 8 . . . Washington Gas Light Co. declared regular quarterly dividends of 37½ cents a common share, $1.12½ on 4.50 preferred and $1.06¼ on 4.25 preferred. Common dividend is payable May 1 to stock of record April 14, while preferred dividends are payable May 10 to stock of record April 25.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: D. Bobb Slattery, a native of Washington who started his career with Acacia Mutual, has been elected vice president and superintendent of agencies for Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co. . . . N. C. Earl, jr., formerly an executive of the Howard Johnson restaurant chain, has been elected president of the Childs Co. Charles Crouch has been named executive vice president and John J. Bergen chairman of executive committee . . . Elmo G. Davis of Washington has been promoted to Norfolk general agent of Southern Railway . . . William H. McConnell has been named assistant vice president-passenger traffic of American Export Lines

Slattery

INSURANCE: February sales of ordinary life insurance totaled $10,253,000 here, a gain of 10 percent over the same 1949 month. For the first two months this year, sales aggregated $19,288,000 or 4 percent higher than in like period last year. The figures were reported yesterday by the Life Insurance Agency Management Association of Hartford.

ODD LOTS: Bank of Commerce & Savings has declared regular quarterly dividend of $2.50 a share, payable March 31 to stock of record March 20 . . . American Wholesalers of 5th and W sts. ne., is conducting a special showing for building trade of new lines of household appliances . . . Stockholders of American Bantam Car Co., in a last-ditch effort to save the Butler plant from a tax sale, have authorized the loan of $900,000 to satisfy the lien . . . A syndicate headed by Chase National submitted the apparent best bid of 75 million dollars of road bonds put up by State of North Carolina . . . Dun & Bradstreet wholesale food price index dipped this week to $5.79, exactly same level as last year .

STILL BIGGER: Development of a 30-inch diameter television tube with more than 600 square inches of screen area was announced yesterday by Dr. Allen B. Du Mont. He said, at opening of a new tube plant in Clifton, N. J., that the giant tube probably will be released by autumn. The 30-inch size has three times the area of the 19-inch tube.

Nats Pound Raschi, Lopat to Outslug Yanks, 11-9

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., March 22.—Why are the great hitters great? Mr. Bud Hillerich, of the Hillerich-Bradsby Co., which makes the bats favored by 95 percent of the major leaguers, was talking about Joe DiMaggio, Ted Williams and Stan Musial.

POVICH

"The better the hitter, the more particular he is about his bat, and I don't necessarily mean our product," Hillerich was saying. DiMag and Williams and Musial, for example, are fussier than old ladies about the sticks they carry up to the plate.

"One time last summer, Williams complained about the way the handle tapered on his favorite model. He sent it back, said the grip didn't feel right. We measured it with calibrators against the models he had been using. Williams was right. His new bats were 5/1000ths of an inch off, and to him it made a difference."

"Ball players who couldn't tell the difference in weight between 10 and 12 pounds of power, can spot an ounce difference in the bats they use, says Hillerich. It's all in what they call the balance, and the man who is used to a 34-ounce bat screams if we send him a 35-ouncer by mistake."

THE MOST finicky customer his factory ever had to deal with, says Hillerich, was Al Simmons, of the A's, who favored a long bat, 35 ounces by 35 inches. Despite the experts who have put in a lifetime at the H. & B. lathes turning and tapering the bats to infinitesimal specifications, Simmons was dissatisfied with a new lot he ordered.

He shipped 'em back, saying, "They're nothing like my regular model. I want the exact duplicates of the bat I've been using." The factory sent Simmons a second shipment, and he still grumbled at their failure to duplicate his regular bat. When Simmons shipped back a third sample of his bat, the distraught superintendent re-sent him the bat that had displeased Simmons in the first place.

Whereupon the factory got a letter from Simmons thanking them, and saying: "This batch is exactly what I wanted. Why couldn't you have sent them in the first place?"

THE ROGERS HORNSBY model is the best seller among major leaguers, although no bat used now in the majors carries the Hornsby autograph. That is because as soon as a player decides on which model he likes, his own autograph is burnished on the business end.

Strangely enough, one of the most popular bats in demand by big leaguers was first popularized by a player who never did quite make good in the majors—Cliff Bolton, former catcher of the Nats. Bolton was never any great shucks as a catcher, but his hitting ability always was recognized.

"All you have to do to recognize the good hitters in baseball is to watch them when they aren't hitting; when they are doing nothing in particular," says Hillerich. "The good hitters are always fondling their bats; they're not at ease unless they have a bat in the hands, or are leaning on one, or just kidding around sighting 'em like rifles. Weak hitters, on the other hand, seem to despise their bats."

THE DiMAGGIO and Musial and Williams bats are a bit too out-size to attain great popularity among the hitters despite the results that trio gets. DiMaggio's bat will run as long as 36 inches, too long for the average man to swing. And unlike other veterans who have taken to lighter bats in their later years, DiMag has actually increased the weight of his to 36 ounces.

One of the more popular models at this time is the Larry Berra bat. The results the short-armed Berra gets with his 34-ounce bludgeon apparently appeals to many a big leaguer. It's a slight variation of the old Hornsby model. It doesn't bear the "Yogi" autograph. "Why do they call me Yogi?" asks Yogi. "My mother doesn't." He insisted on the autograph Lawrence Berra but the factory compromised on Larry.

The H. & B. company, like the ball teams, maintains its own staff of scouts—they scout up the good timber, the lively durable ash that has substance without too much weight. The light ash is the desired product, and for some reason they get most of it from up around Buffalo, N. Y.

Knicks Blast Caps, 103-83, Win Playoff; Scolari Hurt

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, March 22—None too gently, the Washington Caps were summarily shoved out of the National Basketball Association playoffs in Madison Square Garden tonight by the New York Knickerbockers, 103-83.

Displaying just as much speed and hustle as they did in beating out the Caps in Washington Tuesday night, 90-87, the Knicks didn't have as formidable a foe. Suspicion was that the Caps shot their bolt in their first losing effort.

Washington went as far as it could, before collapsing. With three minutes remaining in the first half, the visitors batted to a 41-all tie. But Center Harry Gallatin dropped three successive goals to lead a spurt that gave the Knicks a 51-42 halftime lead.

Then, at the outset of the second half, Freddie Scolari had to leave the game after taking a tumble over a chair while running up court along the sidelines. Scolari was taken to St. Clare's Hospital with a possible ankle fracture. Freddie, who led both teams in the first half with 14 points, took with him what slender hopes the Caps still held.

New York won five of six regular season engagements from the Caps and completely asserted their mastery tonight with their highest total of the year. Oddly, Carl Braun, high scorer in all but one previous games with the Caps, was held to 10 points tonight.

Ref Hurt, Too

More than making up the slack were Harry Gallatin with 20

Don Otten, who didn't play his usually good defensive game, wound up high for the Caps with 20. Making his last pro start, Player-Coach Bob Feerick was blanked from the floor and made only two free throws. Feerick's next stop is Santa Clara where he takes over as basketball coach.

Scolari wasn't the only one hurt. Referee Jocko Collins suffered a painful knee dislocation and also was taken to St. Clare's Hospital where it was reported an operation might be necessary. The Knicks' Paul Noel also twisted an ankle and had to be helped off the court.

Julian to Coach At Dartmouth

Hanover, N. H., March 22 (AP).—Alvin F. (Doggy) Julian was named Dartmouth varsity basketball coach and freshman football coach today.

Julian was head coach of basketball and was football backfield coach at Holy Cross until he signed a Boston Celtics' coaching contract two years ago. His 1946-47 Holy Cross team won the National Collegiate Athletic Association basketball title.

CCNY Faces Ohio State in NCAA Tonight

New York, March 22 (AP).—CCNY's young Beavers, start firing for an unprecedented grand slam tomorrow night as college basketball winds up a smash season with the NCAA championship tournaments here and in Kansas City.

The Beavers, who cracked through for one upset after another to win the National Invitation Tourney Title last week, are favored to capture the Eastern end in Madison Square Garden. They open against Ohio State's Big Ten titlists while Holy Cross' slick Crusaders engage North Carolina State's Southern Conference champions in the second game.

In Kansas City, Bradley's Braves, beaten by CCNY in the N.I.T. final last week, are the choice to win the Western eliminations and earn another shot at the Beavers in the championship contest.

The Kansas City eliminations start Friday night with Bradley tackling U.C.L.A.'s Pacific Coast Conference kings following the curtain-raiser between Baylor, co-champions of the Southwest Conference and Brigham Young, winner of the Skyline six race

Yvonne Sherman Gets Surprising Opposition

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Sonya Klopfer, 15-year-old New Yorker, yesterday established herself as a serious threat to Yvonne Sherman's National Senior Ladies Ice Figure Skating Championship.

The slim youngster with the braided blond hair finished just four points behind Miss Sherman, 1007.7 to 1003.7, in the school figures event which started the four-day national figure skating championships yesterday at Chevy Chase Ice Palace.

The championships move to Uline Arena today where World Men's Senior Champion, Dick Button, takes the featured role. Competition starts at 9 a. m. and will last until approximately 11 p. m.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE
(Uline Arena)
9:00 a. m.—Senior Men's school figures, Dick Button.
12:00 p. m.—Junior Ladies, school figures.
5:30 p. m.—Free skating practice.
6:15 p. m.—Dance practice.
8:00 p. m.—Junior pairs, first skating.
8:45 p. m.—Senior ladies' free skating, Yvonne Sherman.
9:30 p. m.—Senior pairs, first skating.
10:10 p. m.—Senior men's, free skating, Dick Button.
10:45 p. m.—Fours, first skating.

School figures, which count 60 percent of the total score were also contested in the novice mens and novice women's competition yesterday. Taking the lead in those two classes were Ronald Robertson, 12, of Berkley, California and Nancy Minerd, 14, of Akron.

Miss Sherman, third in the recent world's championships at London was considered a shoo-in for school figure honors. The school figures consist of six fundamental geometric patterns which

L. A. Rams Sign Glenn Davis

Los Angeles, March 22 (AP).—Glenn Davis cast his athletic future with the Los Angeles Rams football club today and it goes without saying that the team hopes he picks up in the National League pro wars where he left off as a wizard at West Point.

Passing a number of attractive offers from major league baseball organizations, the 25-year-old "Mr. Outside" of Army fame formally signed a one-year contract with the Rams.

President Dan Reeves of the Rams, presiding at a luncheon in honor of the occasion, declined to announce the financial details.

"Davis will receive a salary in line with other backs on our club," said Reeves. "In fact, Glen requested a salary lower than the Rams were prepared to pay in exchange for bonus arrangements based on his performance."

St. Martin's Wins

St. Martin's won over St. Gabriel's, 19-18, and St. Stephen's defeated Sacred Heart, 34-26, yesterday in Catholic Youth Organization junior league play in the Gonzaga invitational tournament.

Pearce Does All Right; Hudson Gives Up 3 Homers

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 22.—The time has come, perhaps, to view the Nats with a trifle more respect.

They beat the Yankees today; at least they beat a team strongly resembling the Yankees, 11 to 9, in a merry bludgeon-fest curtailed at eight innings by one of central Florida's finest downpours.

The Yanks were without Joe Di Maggio and Tom Henrich and Phil Rizzuto, but they had few excuses on the pitching mound. Ten of the Nats' 11 runs were walloped in against the pitching of two of Casey Stengel's high-bracket veterans, Vic Raschi and Southpaw Eddie Lopat.

Statistically, the Yankees won everything but the ball game. They outhit the Nats, 13 to 10, and they hit all of the day's home runs—over-the-fence clouts by Joe Collins, Hank Bauer and Rookie Jackie Jensen. But the Nats teed off on Raschi for five big runs in the fifth that swung the game.

Sid Hudson bequeathed an 8-6 lead to the Nats' 6-foot-6 rookie right hander Jim Pearce when he departed the scene at the end of five innings. Hudson was quite un-magnificent.

Pearce Fans Bauer

Pearce, pitching the most important game in his bid for a job with the Nats, yielded three runs to the Yanks in three innings, but he displayed commendable flashes of brilliance a couple of times.

The two runs he gave up to the Yanks in the eighth were his own doing. Pearce set the stage for 'em by making a wild throw to second on a ball hit back to the box and then he loaded up the bases with none out by walking Woodling. In this crisis, he responded nicely, if temporarily.

Hank Bauer, who had clubbed a homer off Hudson in the third, worked Pearce to a three-balls-no-strike count with three on and none out, and then Pearce bore down and struck him out on the next three pitches. It was a nice display of poise, but he was somewhat un-poised a minute later when Yogi Berra singled to center for two runs that narrowed the Nats' lead to 10-9 at that point. But Pearce got out of the inning

Braves Lose 9th

Williams' 425-Ft. Belt Sparks Bosox

Bradenton, Fla., March 22 (AP).—Ted Williams poled a tremendous home run over the wall in right center, 425 feet distant, today to spark a five-run rally which carried the Boston Red Sox to a 5-4 exhibition victory over the Boston Braves.

The game was shortened to five innings by rain.

The loss was the Braves' ninth in succession in grapefruit competition and their second in as many games to the Sox.

The Williams' blast came off Vern Bickford

Sugar Ray KOs Costner in 1st

Philadelphia, March 22 (AP).—Welterweight Champion Ray (Sugar) Robinson made short work of George (Sugar) Costner tonight, knocking out the Camden, N. J., boxer in 2.49 of the first round of a scheduled 10-round fight at Convention Hall.

Robinson weighed 154, Costner 150.

A capacity crowd of 11,747 saw the champion dispose of Costner with a left hook to the chin. Costner toppled over on his back and took the full count.

Robinson landed a hard right within the first 30 seconds of the fight and caught Costner's best blows with a flick of his gloves.

He switched to the body for a few blows, let another right land on Costner's jaw and then cut loose with the hook that finished the bout.

Incidentally, this was the second time that Robby KO'd Costner in the first round. He did it in Chicago when the pair met the first time.

Alexandria May Land Game Between Redskins and Bears

Alexandria, the sports boom town across the Potomac River, with two college football games on its 1950 schedule, has a good chance of bringing in the Redskins and Chicago Bears, too.

It depends on whether the pro football schedule leaves September 17 open for an exhibition game and the George Washington High Stadium can be expanded to seat more than 20,000.

Redskin boss George Marshall attended an Alexandria Chamber of Commerce luncheon yesterday when contracts were signed for a November 18 Quantico Marines-Tampa University game at G. W. Stadium.

Marshall said "The Variety and Touchdown Clubs are planning an annual exhibition game between Redskins and Bears. A big problem is finding a place to play it. The Nats are usually using Griffith Stadium through September, leaving the Redskins without a home field.

"We are seriously thinking of playing the game in Alexandria."

G. W. High stadium seats 11,200, but the Alexandria City Council has appropriated $125,000 to expand the capacity to 17,920 by August 1. In addition there are plans to add 1800 temporary seats behind each end zone, and 1000 box seats in front of the regular sideline seats.

That would boost the seating accommodations to 22,520.

Little Leads In Palmetto

Aiken, S. C., March 22 (AP).—Lawson Little's 66 led the Palmetto pro-amateur tournament, but his effort wasn't as spectacular as the round of Bobby Knowles, Brookline, Mass., amateur.

Knowles, who knows the par-71 Palmetto Golf Club layout as well as his own front lawn, registered a 67 and helped out his professional partner, Pete Cooper, to such an extent that they chalked up the best ball score of 60.

Cooper had a 69, which put him in a 10-way tie for eighth place.

Far down in the pack were Ben Hogan, Lloyd Mangrum, along with Sam Snead. Hogan, playing a game that lacked the old Hogan touch in the chipping departments, checked in with a 73.

Snead, who started out his round with four straight bogies, turned in a 74 and checked out for Greensboro, remarking that he had never seen so many fives on his scoreboard in all his life. Mangrum had a 76.

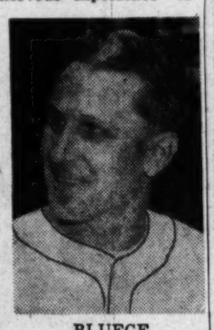
Police Escort Nats' Farm Boss to Airport

Bluege Puts Down 'Insurrection' in Cuba

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

OSSIE BLUEGE, Nats farm club director, was back in Washington last night with a shaky International victory—a Florida International Baseball victory, that is.

He also had a vivid recollection of a nervous experience—of being escorted to the Havana airport by the police, who wanted to make sure that Bluege got safely aboard a departing airliner.



BLUEGE

Although there only briefly, Bluege adapted himself to Havana customs quickly and led an "insurrection" which resulted in the overthrow of the "dictator" of the Washington-controled Havana club, replacing him and his followers with a Clark Griffith-approved regime.

Out as club president, but for how lon no one knows—is Senor Baldomero Acosta—and in—for the same dubious length of time—is Dr. Antonio Casuso. As far as memory goes, these are the only two Cuban's connected with baseball that Scout Joe Cambria hasn't recommended as ballplayers for the Nats.

The fine hand of Cambria, however, was behind Casuso's elevation to the presidency of the Class B team, which has won four straight championships, but has been a consistent loser, financially.

It was this losing streak at the box office in Havana that prompted Griff to dispatch Bluege and Cambria, his Latin-America ambassador at large, to Havana to see what gave in the Congo League.

The Nats president couldn't understand why his eighth-place Nats made money, yet Havana, with a flag winner, was a losing venture. So he reckoned that a change was in order and off went Bluege and Cambria to take a look.

Showing remarkable diplomacy for a former hell-for-leather third baseman and a former laundry owner, respectively, Bluege and Cambria had a meeting with Senor Acosta, incumbent president, immediately upon their arrival in the Pearl of the Antilles.

Several more conferences with Acosta, who owns 64 of the 270 shares in the club, accomplished nothing. He was in favor of the present regime, which consisted of himself and seven relatives on a nine-man board of directors (Cambria was the ninth).

Bluege and Cambria then visited with a Dr. Jose Martinez, an international lawyer, who suggested that a meeting of the stockholders be called to thrash out differences. Apprised of this move, Acosta told Griff's emissaries this was definitely un-Cuban. "That is the American way," Bluege said he and Cambria were informed, "we don't do things like this in Cuba."

The stockholders were summoned, nonetheless, and that's where the fun began. Acosta and his disciples marched into the meeting hall, but not alone. They were re-enforced by Havana police who were directed to arrest Bluege and Cambria for "disturbing the peace."

Lawyer Martinez, however, intervened. He informed Cuba's finest that the meeting was legal, the stockholders could do whatever they wished. Acosta and his legions stormed out of the session.

The meeting went on and the Griffith slate, headed by Dr.

First Victory In 2 Years For Longshot

Charles Town, W. Va., March 22. J. T. Harris' Blue April picked a dreary March afternoon to win for the first time in two years. The Fredericksburg (Va.)-owned mare came from last position in a field of seven to triumph in going away fashion.

The test of about six furlongs, listed as the National Bohemian purse, found M. T. Brooks' Sunny South second, beaten a neck. In third position came Sea Weather, owned by H. M. Simpson of Washington.

Blue April, a 7-year-old, was capably handled by Apprentice J. C. Lauer and brought her scattered backers a $59 mutuel after sprinting the "Charles Town course" in 1:19. Rain fell intermittently during the program but the track remained in good condition.

The race proved a costly one for Owner-Trainer Stanley Green, jr., of Leesburg, Va. His Grand Surprise broke down so badly approaching the finish line that he had to be destroyed.

Principal Joe in the colors of J. P. Simpson 3d, turned in his second victory of the meeting. Facing seven rivals in the fifth race, the day's secondary feature, the 5-year-old scampered home four lengths in front of J. M. Rogers' Woofie. Third money went to E. A. Nicodemus' Wayfern.

Trainers who have been prominent in minor track racing hereabouts for 20 years sent their charges postward to win the key races in a daily double that paid $97.00 for the 2 and 8 combination.

Henry Brown saddled John Foster's Balcurate in the first race and the 7-year-old forged to the wire a length and a half in advance of S. Williams' Valdina Clown with Stemar Stable's Sweet Bobby third.

Mike Johnson gave instructions to Jockey Lamar Bauer and the boy circled the field to win with F. J. Bradford's Golden Plum, a $19 shot in the second event.

Hoyas' O'Keefe Named to East All-Star Team

Georgetown's Tommy O'Keefe yesterday was named to the East all-stars for the East-West charity game in Madison Square Garden April 1 sponsored by the New York Herald Tribune.

O'Keefe, high man with 334 points last season, scored 1018 points in four varsity seasons with the Hoyas.

Also picked yesterday was Gerry Calabrese, St. John's of Brooklyn, who was a standout in the National Invitation tourney.

Terp Golfers In 10 Matches

The University of Maryland yesterday announced a 10-match golf schedule opening at the University of Virginia on April 4. Maryland plays its home matches at the Prince Georges Country Club.

The schedule:

April 4, Virginia, away; 7, Richmond, home; George Washington, home; 14 Delaware, home; 21, Western Maryland, away; 25, Georgetown, home; 29, Loyola, home.

May 4, Johns Hopkins, away; 5, West Virginia, home; 10, George Washington, away.

Maryland Marksmen Shade Georgetown

University of Maryland's marksmen defeated Georgetown for the second time this season, 1409-1404, last night on the Hilltop range although Henry (Hank) Cross, Hoya captain, had the high score of 286.

Team scores: Maryland—Jordan, 284; Waters, 283; Wells, 282; Riggin, 280; Harrison, 280. Georgetown—Cross, 286; Keevers, 282; Poirer, 280; Collier, 278; Bluntzer, 278.

Really 'Ridin' High'

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

WHEN AND IF . . . and Heaven forbid . . . Bing Crosby loses his singing voice, he won't have to dig into his strong box for the stuff that keeps guys in top circulation.

I had a sneak look-see-hear at Paramount's new movie, "Ridin' High," the other night. It's the picture with the race horse motif, and the Old Bingo owns it from flag fall to finish. True, he's called on for a tune here and there, but the accent is on his acting.

Crosby is cast in the role of an owner-trainer and it fits him tighter than 2 pounds of gravy in a 1-pound sack. And why shouldn't it? Bing, through his own horse doings, probably spent more money learning the finesse he dispenses so nonchalantly than the movie cost.

The picture, in true Hollywood fashion, has flaws apparent to turf regulars, but not one that could be attributed to Bing. He is as horsey as a tackroom blanket or the three-eighths pole at Charles Town.

In my book, it's the best race horse picture since. "Three Men on a Horse," offering a fair plot, excellent comedy, much pathos and oodles of action.

Bing loses a girl, loses a race, wins a race, loses a horse, and wins another girl.

The picture isn't "good for racing," as they say in the secretary's office. City-to-city bookie betting, touting and other shady maneuvers are spotlighted, as is a jockey deal in which the rider agrees to pull the hero horse.

The pulling job is absurd. The jockey not only pulls, but if he had taken one more jerk, he probably would have wrested the head off the animal. The rider stands up in the saddle and resembles the anchor man on the Y.M.C.A. tug-o'-war team — all this in the Derby and before the eyes of thousands of fans and the stewards.

After a few thousand feet of this saddle performance, the camera shifts to Crosby, who points and yells, "He's pulling that horse!" A superfluous statement if there ever was one.

But it's a fine picture, even if some of the race crowd sequences are mighty familiar—could I have seen them in "A Day at the Races," starring the Marx Brothers? This is particularly true of the mob hysteria, having to do with the spreading of a tip.

The tip angle reminds me of the time our Shirley Povich met Pete Marshall, a telegraph operator, on the rail at Laurel.

"Who do you like in the next?" asked Shirley. "There was a wire this morning on Sugar Jim," whispered Pete. "They tell me he can't lose. What do you like."

"I went into the figures pretty good," replied Shirley." I came up with Merry Mate."

The two separated. Both Sugar Jim and Merry Mate were out of the money. After the race, they met again.

"Who did you go to?" asked Pete. "I played that wire horse of yours, Sugar Jim" replied Shirley.

"Well, I'll be darned," came back Pete. "Like a sap, I went for that lousy figure horse of yours."

But as I started out to write, Crosby rides high, wide and handsome in "Ridin' High."

Bluege Pulls Coup in Cuba

Casuso and including Calvin Griffith and Bluege as first and second vice presidents, respectively, was elected.

Acosta, even though deposed, wasn't through. He took away the balls and bats from the Havana team, curtailing their practices and exhibition games.

This crisis was overcome when the new regime supplied the Havana team with necessary equipment.

The meeting over and the Acosta followers not exactly pleased with the results, Bluege quickly accepted an offer of a police escort to the American Club.

"That Acosta apparently hasn't heard of the good neighbor policy," Bluege was saying last night.

Just to be on the safe side, Ossie also had a police escort to the airport. Shortly after he landed in Orlando to report back to Commander in Chief Griffith, Bluege said he was told there had been attempts to hold up his plane in Havana.

"Guess the pilot didn't understand Spanish and took off on schedule," Bluege quipped. "But I understand all the Spanish I want to know—one word—vamos. It means, let's go.

"I did."

Pleased over the success Bluege had in acquiring the Washington club's control over a team it owns, but obviously not confident that the situation is permanent, Griffith has turned the whole business over to Commissioner Chandler and George Trautman, minor league czar.

Pirro, C. U. Star, To Coach Colts

Rocco Pirro, former Catholic U. fullback who performed for three pro clubs, yesterday was named an assistant coach by the Baltimore Colts.

His appointment rounds out an entirely new four-man coaching for the Colts who make their debut in the National League next season.

Darnell, Schweigert Wrestle to Draw

Billy Darnell and Dutch Schweigert wrestled to a draw in the feature match on last night's wrestling card at Turner's Arena before 1200.

Tiny Mills, Miguel Torres and Ace Freeman combined to take two of three falls from the Kamaroffs, Walter, Joe and Ivan in a six-man team match. A preliminary match saw Kenny Ackles defeat Polo Cordova.

Safford-Chandler Win

Safford-Chandler trounced Douglas Memorial, 74-38, and National Training School beat the Bethesda Merchants, 48-34, in District Recreation league games at Rosevelt last night.

Bill Bennings Says:

AT CHARLES TOWN

DEAR FOLKS:

The Vanderbilt Stable not only is eyeing the Kentucky Derby with Bed 'O Roses, but also with another filly, Next Move. They were shipped from Florida and will be groomed in New York. Their big trial race will be the Experimental Handicap No. 2 at Jamaica on April 15 and their future will be decided off their showing. Among the 27 fillies who have started in the Derby only one has won, Regret in 1915. The Thomas speed camera used for photo finishes here since 1938, has been purchases by Edwin A. Fitzpatrick, jr., who has been operating the device since the death of Jack Thomas in 1937. Jockey Willie Downs, who made his presence felt here, left for Laurel where he expects plenty of action starting Saturday.

LAUREL
MARCH 25
FIRST RACE
2 P.M.

Frank Thomas Trials Victor

Warrenton, Va.—March 22. Mr. and Mrs. Dulaney Randolph's smooth-moving Frank Thomas, was ridden by Mrs. Randolph to the championship award at the Harkaway Hunter Trials held here today. Reserve honors went to Sally Spillman's War Snob.

Frank Thomas acquired 13 points and a leg on the Warrenton Hunt Challenge championship trophy by taking blues in both the thoroughbred hunters and the owners-up classes and placing in the $100 paneling stake.

War Snob, well-handled by her youthful owner, a follower of the Warrenton Hounds, was winner of the halfbred hunter event and took thirds in both the owners-up and the paneling stake. Mr. and Mrs. Newell J. Ward's Polyburn, last year's champion, turned back the field in the stake test to win the $100 award for the Middleburg Hunt. Polyburn was ridden by Mrs. Ward.

SUMMARIES

HALFBRED HUNTERS—1; Sally Spillman's War Snob; 2, Mis. James McCormick's Charlie; 3, Mr. and Mrs. Newell J. Ward's Thunder; 4, Mr. and Mrs. Ward's Little Jiggs.

REGISTERED THOROUGHBRED HUNTERS—1, Mrs. Dulaney Randolph's Frank Thomas; 2, Mrs. Howard Kaye's Cavalcloud; 3, Mrs. Robert C. Winmill's Wisdom; 4, Mr. and Mrs. Ward's Polyburn.

HUNTERS, OWNERS UP—1, Frank Thomas; 2, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Clark, jr.'s Ever So; 3, War Snob; 4, Polyburn.

$100 PANELING STAKE, OPEN TO ALL—1, Polyburn; 2, Frank Thomas; 3, War Snob; 4, Ever So.

CHAMPION—Frank Thomas, 13 points.
RESERVE—War Snob, 9 points.

Cubs Win, 6-5 On Sauer's Homer in 9th

San Francisco, March 22 (AP).—Hank Sauer blasted a fast ball over the left field fence with two away in the ninth to give the Chicago Cubs a 6-5 victory over the San Francisco Seals today.

The Cubs' shortstop, Roy Smalley, also hit a homer.

Maglie, Koslo Hold Pirates to 3 Hits

Stockton, Calif., March 22 (AP).—The New York Giants defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates, 6 to 2, in their exhibition baseball game here today.

Fine early season pitching performances on the part of two Giant hurlers, Dave Koslo and Sal Maglie, limited the Pirates to three hits.

double, were by Catcher Eddie Fitzgerald.

Maglie took over in the sixth and held the Pirates hitless. The Giants got to starter Bill Werle for three runs in the fifth on three singles, two bases on balls, an error and a sacrifice.

Red Rookies Hold Cards To 4 Hits, Win, 4-1

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 22 (AP). — Two Cincinnati rookies, Johnny Hetki and Harry Perkowski, had too much stuff for the St. Louis Cards today, and the Reds copped a 4-to-1 decision.

Hetki, who won 16 games for Syracuse last season, stopped the Birds with two hits, both by Stan Musial, in five innings. Petkowski also yielded but two hits, one a pinch homer by Bill Howerton for the Cards' only score.

Griffs, Whip Yanks, 11-9

by luring Johnson into an infield out.

The Nats gave Pearce another run to work with in their own half of the eighth against Yankee Rookie Dave Madison, up from Kansas City. Dente's hit-and-run single moved Yost to third, and he scored when Rookie Shortstop Brideweiser cleanly booted Noren's grounder. Then came the rains at the end of the inning.

Lopat was pounced on for three runs after getting the first two Nats out in the opening inning. Eddie Robinson tripled to right after Noren Walked, and Mele singled. Clyde Vollmer scored Mele with a double to center.

Raschi Wild

With Collins and Bauer hitting those homers off Hudson over the left field wall and Jensen banging another in the fourth, the Yanks moved in front, 6-3. Jensen's swat was something special. It was a line drive over the right field wall by a right-handed hitter.

Raschi walked the first three men he faced in the fifth and it led to five more Washington runs. Robinson and Pinch-hitter Ed Stewart rapped singles, and then Pinch-hitter Sherry Robertson banged a two-run single to center.

An inning later, Raschi walked one man, hit another, and Noren scored 'em with a two-bagger to center that improved the Nats' lead to 10-7.

IN SHORT . . . Casey Stengel didn't bother to come to Tinker Field with the Yanks, and Jim Turner skippered the team . . . DiMaggio was left at home with a leg bruise, and Henrich is nursing a sore knee . . . Rizzuto was on the scene, but he is favoring a lame arm . . . Strong winds blowing toward the outfield helped those Yankee homers over the fences . . . Yogi Berra collected three of the Yanks' hits . . . Young Pearce walked only two batters in his three-inning stint, and showed Harris enough talent otherwise to insure his retention at least until squad-cutting time on May 18 . . . Tomorrow, Harris will look at three more of his rookie pitchers, Bob McChesney, Buzz Dozier and Earl Davis vs. Chattanooga.

Second Look at Budget Shows Slashes Affect Almost Every Agency

The omnibus budget now before the House is proving to be much tougher and tighter than it appeared at first glance.

"Just about every single agency," a veteran budget expert observed yesterday, "will have to tighten its belt to live within the money allowed by the House committee.

Commerce officials are begining to realize the truth of that statement. On paper, it appeared the department wouldn't be hurt by the omnibus budget. But officials who have studied it made this startling report:

That the committee budget knocked out about 2000 jobs requested by the President in his budget. Between 1000 and 1200 of the jobs are now filled and the employes in them—half here and the other half in the field—will have to be fired if the committee budget is approved. In addition, another 800 to 1000 new jobs were not allowed by the committee.

The hardest hit Commerce agency would be the Civil Aeronautics Administration, which was given a seven-million-dollar slash in its salary fund. If it stands, about 500 CAA employes would have to be laid off or demoted. Export Control, which is going through a painful reduction, with career employes with 20 and 25 years of service being fired, would have to lay off another 125. About 100 employes in the Civil Aeronautics Board would have to be dropped, and the Bureau of Standards would have to cut off between 50 and 75. The $400,000 slash for the Patent Office threatens the new promotion program in that agency and could lead to a minor layoff there. The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce also would be hard hit.

Veterans' Administration is another agency that would have to make a sizable reduction here under the committee budget. It was given a cut of $4,191,605 in administrative funds and most of it was earmarked for offices in this city. Upwards of 800 employes here are threatened with the loss of their jobs. The committee ordered these money cuts here:

Loan guaranty, $85,015; insurance, $593,960; real estate, $55,840; coordination, $144,680; foreign relations, $31,225; information, $43,680; administrative service, $784,956; finance, $226,440; finance, $226,440 and utility, $59,300. The following reductions were ordered for both departmental and field offices: personnel, $33,880; supply, $482,000 and general operating expenses, $1,650,000.

The committee directed that no reductions be made in the staff of VA's department of medicine and surgery. The layoffs would be made on top of the 3000 now being made in the administrative offices.

Layoffs would be continued in the military agencies. A spokesman said the committee budget definitely provided new cuts, but the precise number couldn't be determined for several days. A score of agencies would be compelled to absorb all or part of the cost of last year's pay raise and most of them will have to make layoffs in order to do it.

LEAVE BATTLE: The Council of State Chambers of Commerce yesterday jumped into the battle over annual leave for Federal workers. It concludes that Uncle Sam "really goes overboard" in granting annual and sick leave to his employes.

A study made for the council by Alvin A. Burger, its research director, says that 60,000 Federal workers could be fired if an 11-day reduction were made in their annual leave, from 26 to 15 days annually.

Burger also reported that Federal leave policies are much more liberal than those of either State governments or private industry. New York State allows its employe four weeks' vacation, the most liberal policy cited by Burger. Many States limit their employes to two weeks' vacation.

Meantime, the legal eagles yesterday were arguing the possible effect of the leave rider that is intended to forbid the further accumulation of annual leave by Federal workers during this calendar year.

Corning Asks Merger of Central With Roosevelt

Proposal Raises Immediate Protest; Mrs. Wells Would Return to Old Job

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Merger of Roosevelt and Central High Schools into one school to be known as Roosevelt-Central was proposed to the Board of Education yesterday by Schools Superintendent Hobart M. Corning.

The school head said that the combination to be housed in the Roosevelt building would preserve the name and traditions of Central, the city's oldest high school.

Central students will move out of their present building at 13th and Clifton sts. nw. at the end of this school year and the building will become a Negro high school.

Dr. Corning's proposal ran into immediate opposition from representatives of the Roosevelt High School Alumni Association.

Fears Over-Shadowing

Miss May P. Bradshaw, retired principal of Roosevelt and two of the school's alumni, told the board meeting Roosevelt with its own traditions might be over-shadowed in the coupling of the schools.

Miss Bradshaw, who for 40 years was associated with Roosevelt as a teacher and principal, declared a school cannot succeed with "divided loyalty."

Students and teachers transferred from Central should come in as students and teachers of Roosevelt, she declared.

In presenting his plan to the board, Dr. Corning said that to disband Central as a school would be "highly undesirable."

Would "Alleviate Shock"

He said students, teachers and alumni of Central suffered "considerable shock" when the school board transferred their building to use by Negro students.

Loss of the school could be "greatly alleviated by the preservation of the name of Central," he declared.

"We are concerned now not with the transfer of a building, but with the preservation of an institution built upon human interests, loyalties, and traditions," he said.

Dr. Corning proposed that Lawrence G. Hoover, present principal at Central, become principal of the new merged school.

Mrs. Elva C. Wells, acting principal at Roosevelt since the retirement of Miss Bradshaw a year ago, would be restored to her former position of assistant principal.

Would Transfer Officers

Other school officers now assigned to Central would be transferred to similar positions in other schools, Dr. Corning said.

Board members took Corning's plan under consideration and agreed to act on it at their next meeting. The school head said that a quick decision is needed to give school officers sufficient time to prepare for the reassigning of Central's students and teachers as well as the relocation of Central property.

Roosevelt Alumnus Henry Clay Espey told board members that the proposed merger would turn Roosevelt students and teachers into "outcasts in their own building."

Warns Against Sympathy

"Sympathy for Central should not be used as a basis for destroying Roosevelt," he declared.

Leon Cooper of the alumni group said that the schools could not effectively be merged.

He said that Roosevelt had no objections to the assignment of Central teachers and students to the school but that it wanted to keep Mrs. Wells as principal.

"She has shown ability, foresight and understanding" in administering the building," he said.

Salvation Army Project Aids Morale

Some 100 men at 526 1st st. nw., are being patched up for return to a life of usefulness.

"The man who comes here has been traveling alone a long way for a long time," said Brig. Arne Lekson, the 61-year-old director of the Salvation Army's Men's Social Service Center there.

Most of them have come out second best in battles with a harsh world, he pointed out.

What happens to the contents of the center's three-story warehouse, collected by the Army's fleet of 14 trucks, is a fair example of what happens to the men who wander in for a visit—lasting days, weeks, months and sometimes years.

Mountains of discarded paper, furniture, clothing electrical appliances, stoves, odds and ends of what-have-you — anything the housewife ever used—are restored to usefulness by men who were also "on their uppers."

Joint Restoration

The restoration is a simultaneous one—for the men and the material.

The men take in the vast supplies of unwanted furniture and clothing, sort it, and refurbish it for resale through the Salvation Army's low-cost sales stores for low-income families.

Each "resident" of the center, whether he is there for a day or a year, is given work in the repair shops. He puts in a full day and then finds a refreshing, fully equipped recreation room awaiting his pleasure after a full meal in the center's spacious cafeteria.

The association and fellowship provided by the center, "with the absence of intoxicants," provides the solution to immeasurable loneliness and disappointment for many men—young, middle-aged and old.

Religious Services

There are three religious services they attend each week, "but we don't harp on religion, because we don't want to make it obnoxious to the men," said Lekson.

For men in distress, there is always a bed with clean whites and blankets. First, they are placed in a dormitory. Then, if they appear worthy and earn their place, they are placed in double rooms. Finally, before leaving to regain their way in the world, they spend a while in a private room in the center.

3 School Administrative Jobs, New Principalships Set Up

Major administrative changes in the school system were approved by the Board of Education yesterday with the promise of more to come.

The board set up three new administrative jobs and established positions of assistant principals for elementary schools. Permission must be secured from the District Commissioners and Congress before the posts are filled.

The board would hire a new associate superintendent in charge of personnel, an additional administrative assistant who would be assigned to the office of First Assistant Superintendent Norman J. Nelson, and a chief examiner for the Negro schools.

School officials told board members that even with the new positions additional administrative help will be needed, particularly in the Negro schools, to keep pace with mounting enrollments.

Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, first assistant superintendent in charge of Negro schools, said that a reorganization of top administrative jobs is under study and that when a report is ready he will point out the need for an additional associate superintendent for the Negro division.

School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning said the reorganization is following closely recommendations of the Congress-authorized survey on District schools conducted by Dr. George D. Strayer, retired professor of education at Columbia University.

The survey, in particular, called for the appointment of a director of personnel to be in charge of teachers' recruitment and selection and the in-service training program of teachers. This work is now split up among other school officials with no central method of keeping records.

Dr. Corning said that assistant principals for elementary schools would be assigned only to large buildings where the administration load is too heavy for one person.

In other actions the board:

Reassigned an elementary school principal and appointed three new principals, as follows:

Mrs. Ruth S. Woodson, principal at Pierce, Taylor and Hayes schools, reassigned to the new Nalle School.

Mrs. Gertrude H. Hamm, sixth grade teacher at the Payne School, principal of the Payne and Webb Schools.

Mrs. Camille T. Lewis, sixth grade teacher at Lovejoy, principal of Blow and Pierce Schools.

Mrs. Lillian S. Glascoe, fourth grade teacher at Simmons, principal of Hayes and Taylor Schools.

Retired two teachers: Mrs. Ruth C. Horner, teacher at the Logan School, and Frederick F. Hundley, teacher at Browne Junior High School.

Alexandria Council Votes Annex Writ

Alexandria City Council in special session yesterday voted final passage of an annexation ordinance which calls for a 7½-square-mile bite out of adjacent Fairfax County land.

The council's action, passed by 4-to-1 vote, carried with it these developments:

An assertion by Mayor Franklin P. Backus, who said he also spoke for a majority of the city heads, that taxes would not increase in Alexandria or in the Fairfax area sought if annexation goes through.

Fight Promised

A promise by Marshall J. Beverley, the dissenting councilman, that he would appear before the annexation tribunal to fight against the move.

Announcement by V. Floyd Williams, city attorney, that legal proceedings will be instituted early next week.

Williams, in response to a question, told the audience that "it looks like the city will break even, and possibly make money" during the first five years after annexation has taken place.

He pointed out that Virginia law prohibits raising of taxes in annexed territory for five years after it has taken in. During that time, he said, capital improvements to the amount of 12 percent of the area's nearly eight million dollars assessed value must be made by the city.

Moved Called Sound

Mayor Backus said this expenditure would be offset by real estate revenue from the annexed area. It is that revenue that will pay for the capital improvements.

"The annexation committee seriously considered the tax question," Backus added. "The concensus of opinion is that annexation is not only economically sound but a financial gain to the city.

Councilman Beverly, who has consistently opposed the move, asserted annexation "will be another burden on the taxpayers of this city. I am going to fight this citizens of this city."

Fireman Hurt

Woman, 47, Is Rescued From Fire

A 47-year-old woman, rescued from the second floor of her home during a fire, suffered slight arm and hand burns early yesterday.

The victim, Mrs. Helen Paley, was taken from her home at 645 Acker st. ne., by two firemen, one of whom was injured slightly.

Both she and Pvt. Grant Turner of No. 10 Engine Company were treated at Casualty Hospital.

Cause of the blaze, confined to the first floor of the house, was not determined. Witnesses said damage would not exceed several hundred dollars.

Towel Co. Fire Damage Estimated at $25,000

The Fire Marshal's office yesterday estimated that damage to the Capital Towel Service Co., 1111-1117 20th st. nw., struck by fire Tuesday night, would run "upwards of $25,000."

One fireman was injured in the blaze, and traffic was delayed almost an hour.

Capt. Roy A. Warfield, of the Fire Marshal's office, said the fire started in a storage room on the second floor of the two-story building. He listed as probable causes either careless smoking or lint near a steam pipe.

Warfield said the entire roof structure, and possibly the second floor, will have to be replaced.

Dr. Pasvolsky to Speak At C. C. N. Y. Meeting

Dr. Leo Pasvolsky, author and international economist, will be guest speaker at a meeting of the Washington Chapter of the City College of New York Alumni Association at 8:15 p. m. Friday in the Ambassador Hotel. His subject will be "United Nations Today."

Dr. Pasvolsky is a director of the Brookings Institution and has served on several United Nations commissions.

Four Arrested For Lottery At City Dump

All the paper at the Kenilworth Dump in the Southeast was not just trash, police testified yesterday. Some of it was in the form of numbers slips and four employes of the municipally operated dump were held on charges of operating a lottery.

Held by U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence in $1500 bond each for the grand jury were James Mayo, 52, of 1510 E st. ne.; Herbert H. Lewis of 620 7th st. se. John Francis Butler of 1649 Gales st. ne. and Cordell Gresham. Police said they had no home address for Gresham.

The men were arrested March 1 by Lieut. John B. Monroe of the Fourteenth Police Precinct and Pvt. James S. Payne of the Fourth Precinct.

Payne described how, garbed in work clothes, and riding a trash truck he appeared at the dump on four occasions last February and made numbers bets with marked money.

The cash, he said, was recovered later from a pot-bellied stove in a shack where trucks are checked on the dump grounds.

"That's making numbers play very convenient for the public," Lawrence commented as he set bond. "Next thing they'll be selling numbers in public comfort stations."

Takoma Man Injured as Car Hits Light Pole

Frank Sands French, sr., 50, of 511 Carroll ave., Takoma Park, Md., was injured seriously yesterday when his car was forced from the road into an electric light pole.

French was taken to Prince Georges General Hospital, Cheverly, Md., suffering from severe head injuries which may affect one eye.

He told Prince Georges County police his car had been forced from Ager rd. near Riggs rd. in Green Meadows by another car which failed to stop.

Abortion Victim Faced Eviction, Jury Informed

Couldn't Afford Third Child, Aunt Testifies as Trial Of Salesman Opens

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

Pretty Nina Jean Campbell, 20-year-old mother of two, underwent the abortion which killed her because she could not afford a third child, her aunt testified in District Court yesterday.

Mrs. Mabel Earnshaw, 1811 23rd st. se., testified that she arranged the abortion with Ralph W. Myers, 44-year-old shade salesman, because she "felt sorry" for her niece.

Myers is on trial before a jury of 10 men, two women and two male alternates, and Judge F. Dickinson Letts.

The indictment charges that Myers "on or about January 4, 1950, with intent to procure the miscarriage of Nina Jean Campbell, who was pregnant, did use in and upon her a certain instrument, that is to say a syringe, in consequence of which" she died.

Theatened With Eviction

In his opening statement, Prosecutor John C. Conliff told the jury that Mrs. Campbell lived with her husband's parents at 4800 O st., Hillside, Md., and when three months' pregnant was told that if she had any more children she would have to leave her two-room apartment.

Myers performed the abortion, Conliff charged, in the apartment at 1321 Fairmont st. nw., of Miss Ruth Childs, former Children's Hospital nurse, with whom he was "extremely well acquainted."

Mrs. Campbell's body was found by policemen and her husband, Carlton, on the morning of January 5, badly mutilated.

"The body of the deceased," Conliff said, "had severe lacerations on the lower lip, scratches and abrasions about the face, the hips and the entire left arm. There were teeth marks on the upper arm and outer thigh. The cervix was injured. There were extensive bruises over the upper part of the genitals, and there was a concussion of her brain."

Death was caused, Conliff said, when a "rubber syringe with tubing and a nozzle struck a sinus in the uterus and forced air into the blood stream." Conliff said the autopsy showed quantities of air in both ventricles of the heart and in the brain.

To Call Mercy Trial Experts

Defense attorney James J. Laughlin has stated he intends to prove that she was not killed by an air embolism, and said he would call witnesses who testified in the mercy-killing trial of Dr. Hermann N. Sander of Candia, N. H., to prove it.

Laughlin was granted a motion to bring Dr. Richard Ford, head of the Harvard University Department of Legal Medicine and a Sander witness, at government expense as a defense witness.

Mrs. Earnshaw spent two hours in the witness chair yesterday afternoon. She testified how she, her husband, Campbell, and his brother tried unsuccessfully for 10 hours to find out what happened to "Niny" after she entered the Fairmont st., apartment at 9 p. m., January 4.

At 7:30 a. m., January 5, she testified in the packed courtroom: "I finally reached Myers in the apartment by telephone."

"Dead As a Doornail"

"I said where is she and how is she," Mrs. Earnshaw testified.

"He said she was dead as a doornail.

"I asked him what had happened.

"He said 'After everything was over, she got up and got dressed and had a heart attack and died,'" Mrs. Earnshaw said.

Under cross-examination, the 29-year-old aunt testified "I told Niny I didn't care to have anything to do with that (procuring an abortion). Really the thought ran through my mind that I wished it was me that was pregnant instead of her." She said she had no children.

The abortion trial jurors are Edward A. Avery, 45, of 1825 F st., nw., National Museum aide; Wilton T. Schombert, 51, of 1563 33rd st., nw., upholsterer; Louis O. Shudde, 59, of 4635 49th st., nw., Federal Security Agency actuary; Mrs. Nellie V. Wiseman, 42, of 1615 Kramer st. nw., Treasury Department clerk; William D. Researcher Hangs Self by Electric Cord

A 51-year-old researcher for the State Department was found hanging from an electric cord in her apartment yesterday, police said.

Miss Ross

The woman was identified as Miss Ethel Ross, 1457 Park rd. nw., a research assistant in the Professors' and Specialists' Unit of the Exchange Personnel Division of the State Department.

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, last night issued a certificate of suicide.

She was discovered by the resident manager of the apartment house and a fellow employe who was sent to find out why Miss Ross had not reported for work.

Homicide detectives said there were indications Miss Ross had planned her death for some time. They said the cord was attached to the door frame of a closet.

Two typewritten notes concerning disposition of her property were found on a desk. However, they did not specifically indicate suicide, police added.

Miss Ross' division chief, J. S. Espinosa, said she seemed in good health and apparently had no worries.

A native of Texas, Miss Ross had lived in Washington since 1945. From 1942 to 1945 she was a mail censor for the Army at San Antonio, Tex.

Her State Department division supervises exchange of students and professors with other countries.

Surviving are five brothers, Malcolm K. Ross, of 2300 Colston dr., Silver Spring; Earl, James and Charles Ross, of Texas, and A. L. Ross of Denver, Colo., and a sister, Mrs. Thelma Wood of Kearney, Nebr.

Bus Compressor Explodes After Riders Leave

A clutch compressor in the back of a Capital Transit Co. bus exploded yesterday morning a few minutes after the driver had discharged a full load of passengers.

The driver, William H. Evers, 30, of 134 Ridge rd., Greenbelt, was not injured.

The blast ripped holes in the floor and side of the bus, and shattered windows. There was no fire.

Capital Transit officials said the explosion took place at 18th and H sts. nw. Evers had discharged his passengers on a Potomac Park route bus, and was heading towards a company garage.

Evers said the bus hadn't been operating properly.

Army Man to Get Philippine Medal

A Virginian, unable to come to Washington, will have a Philippine army decoration taken to him Friday by Philippine Ambassador Joachim M. Elizade.

The Philippine Embassy said Col. H. C. Fowler, U. S. Army retired, will be presented the Gold Cross medal during ceremonies at the Colonel's home, Greenway Farms, Afton, Va. Fowler is unable to come here because of illness. He is being cited for his work of directing a makeshift force of clerks, cooks and drivers of the Seventy-first Field Artillery Regiment in driving off a sneak attack by the Japanese on Bataan on January 21, 1942.

Edward J. Flynn Buys Large Farm

Edward J. Flynn, former New York Democratic leader, has purchased a 412-acre farm in Montgomery County adjoining a 350-acre place he acquired two years ago.

The farm, fronting on the Potomac River near Edwards Ferry, was purchased from Samuel R. Jarboe for about $30,000, according to William Y. Boulc, Flynn's attorney.

Boulc said the deed was made out in the name of Thomas F. Corcoran, an Air Force veteran and friend of Flynn's two sons for many years. Flynn plans to raise thoroughbred horses on the farm, the attorney said.

B'nai B'rith Plans to Build New Headquarters in District

Members of B'nai B'rith, winding up a five-day convention here, decided to erect a headquarters building in Washington as the first project of the newly organized Henry Monsky Foundation.

The foundation, established in the memory of the organization's longtime president, had been discussing whether to place the structure in New York or Washington. The foundation has a two-million-dollar goal toward which $350,000 was pledged at the convention.

The building would gather the presently scattered units of B'nai B'rith—now in New York, Chicago and Washington—under one roof and also provide exhibit halls where examples of Jewish contributions to democracy could be shown.

The foundation also plans to establish a national summer camp for Jewish youth and open the 200th Hillel Foundation at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. There are now 199 such units at colleges throughout the world.

Frank Goldman, Lowell, Mass., attorney, was reelected president of B'nai B'rith at the elections. Sidney G. Kusworm of Dayton, Ohio, was reelected treasurer and Maurice Bisgyer of Washington was renamed secretary. Goldman defeated Philip M. Klutznick of Chicago, former commissioner of the Federal Public Housing Authority.

The number of vice presidents was increased from three to seven, with the following named: District 1, Max J. Schneider, New York City; 2, I. W. Garek, Columbus, Ohio; 3, William M. Gerber, Philadelphia; 4, David Blumberg, Los Angeles; 5, Sol Fass, Portsmouth, Va.; 6, Benjamin Samuels, Chicago; 7, John Horwitz, Oklahoma City, Okla.

The convention adopted several resolutions, including these:

Support for President Truman's civil rights program and similar legislation on state levels; support for state laws and declaring restrictive covenants void; regret at the "watered down" Fair Employment Practices bill passed by the House and hope that the Senate would restore powers.

Support for a public housing program assuring "decent housing" and no discrimination.

Support for complete equality of educational opportunity and fair educational practices laws and abolition of the quota system in college admissions.

Praise for city and State commissions on human relations and recommendation that other cities and States follow suit, especially in instituting in-service training in human and race relations in police departments.

Withdrawal of the national B'nai B'rith Bowling Association from the American Bowling Congress unless the latter takes steps to insure discontinuance of "discriminatory, racist admissions policy."

Ask United Nations and United States to use their good offices to halt the flow of arms to Arab nations.

Suicide Verdicts Issued in Drake, Boimblatt Deaths

Certificates of suicide were issued yesterday by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, in the deaths of William H. Drake, 40, who plunged from a window in the George Washington University Hospital, and Max Boimblatt, 46, a watch-crystal repairman who died of cyanide poisoning.

Boimblatt was stricken in his offices at 527 9th st. nw., at 10 a. m. Tuesday, and was pronounced dead 50 minutes later. A glass containing a cyanide solution was found next to his desk.

Drake, who lived at 2931 Faulkner pl., Kensington, had been admitted to George Washington University Hospital Monday night for a "nervous condition." He plunged five stories to his death Tuesday morning.

Mary Haworth's Mail

After 20 Years' Happy Marriage, Man Turned From Wife to Another Woman, and Merely Says He Doesn't Know Why; Wife Is Ill From Shock

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What can a woman do to regain faith in a husband who has admitted being unfaithful? We have been married 20 years and have two lovely children. My husband is the home type, a very generous provider, and materially there is nothing he wouldn't do for our comfort.

Until a year ago our home was a model of domestic felicity. Then quite abruptly our intimate relationship ended. From a reliable source I learned that Tom was having an affair with a woman whom he was meeting during business hours. When I asked him why he had done this, he merely answered that he didn't know.

I have searched myself in vain to discover what I may have done wrong, or failed to do, that brought on this tragedy,—for to me it is a tragedy.

Although my husband has promised never to see this woman again, I just can't believe him, and I can't still the hurt he has done my pride. As time goes on it gets worse.

Our children think I am ill; they know nothing of what their father has done. I love him very much, but what is happening to this love, when I cannot seem to forget? Sometimes I think a separation would be the solution! but then I realize that would be so unfair to our children who idolize their father. What is your advice? P. L.

No Charity for Him

DEAR P. L.: If you cannot keep an open-hearted attitude towards your husband since he failed your trust, and if you are principally engrossed in exploring your anguished reactions to the grand disillusionment, then you may know that you don't really love him.

According to I Corinthians 13, "Love suffereth long and is kind; seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; beareth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things. Love never faileth . . . And now abides faith, hope and charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity."

Charity is used as a synonym for love in this great passage; and in your present state of mind, there is no charity for your husband.

It seems to me you fiercely resent his selfishness in having an affair that shattered your previous blind confidence that he was the absolute guarantor of enduring full satisfaction and security for you, in love and sex and materially. Yet because you feel utterly dependent upon his person and resources for significance, satisfaction and sustenance, even though his character and devotion are proved imperfect, you daren't ventilate your outrage with frank ferocity, nor do you dare take steps to punish him, by seeking separation or divorce.

Needs Faith in Herself

CONSEQUENTLY you are indeed emotionally sick about the situation and getting worse as time goes on, due to investing more and more of your energies in trying unconsciously to repress this terrific subjective conflict. On the rational level, you honestly don't know the meaning of your moping. As an aid to recovery, you need above all to develop faith in yourself, which will automatically dissolve the unconscious stalemate of distracted resentful dependency upon the husband who "failed" you once.

As this inner darkness begins to clear up, you should find yourself spontaneously able to love your husband more truly, more maturely than ever before—in newly developed sympathetic awareness that his personality will always be somewhat of a mystery to you, and that he is subject to conflicts and frustrations, too, and liable to give a poor account of himself at times.

For advice, you really should have some firsthand psychiatric help to get your distortions cleared up; but if such help isn't available, study Dr. Edmund Bergler's book "Divorce Won't Help" (Harper & Brothers), which gives the layman a clinical slant on multiple factors contributing to your type of worry, and then discusses ways and means of arriving at better terms with oneself and one's marriage partner. M. H.

Confessions of a Famous Father

Geography Knows What It's Doing in Some Cases

By John Mason Brown

INSTALLMENT FOUR
THE LITTLE VISITOR

A WEEK had passed since my wife had received, and joyfully answered, our friend Mary Smythe's letters announcing she was coming to our town for a visit.

Not only was she coming, but she was bringing her daughter with her. This exciting news was, of course, underscored three times and followed by a picket fence of exclamation points.

"Geography," wrote Mary, "has played a dirty trick on us in keeping our families apart."

We, too, had been eager for that happy day when Polly and our boys would meet and, in their parents' fashion, become devoted to one another.

Begin to Suspect, Put Up a Fuss

OUR sons began to suspect something untoward when by noon we closed in on them with orders, which finally turned into supplications, to wash their hands and faces, put on their blue suits, shine their shoes, select their best ties, pick out the whitest of clean shirts, and brush and comb their hair.

"Why?" asked the younger. "We want to go skating."

"Who's coming anyway?" snarled the elder.

"Polly Smythe," beamed my wife. "Isn't that nice?"

"Who's she?"

I said brightly, "The daughter of two very dear friends of your mother's and mine."

"A girl—p-e-e-u-u-u! How old?"

"Eight."

"Eight!" groaned the older boy, aged nine.

"Is she hubba-hubba?" asked his brother.

"I haven't seen her since she was three," their mother said. "She was a darling little girl. I know you'll love her."

"Aw, gee!"

Times Changed, So Did Polly

BY I O'CLOCK (and also by a miracle) the boys were both shining in the discomfort of cleanliness. The doorbell rang, and there stood Polly and her mother.

Polly's mother was the identical Mary my wife had known these many years.

But the daughter—well, even at one dismayed glance I could tell that Polly at eight was not the same darling little girl my wife remembered.

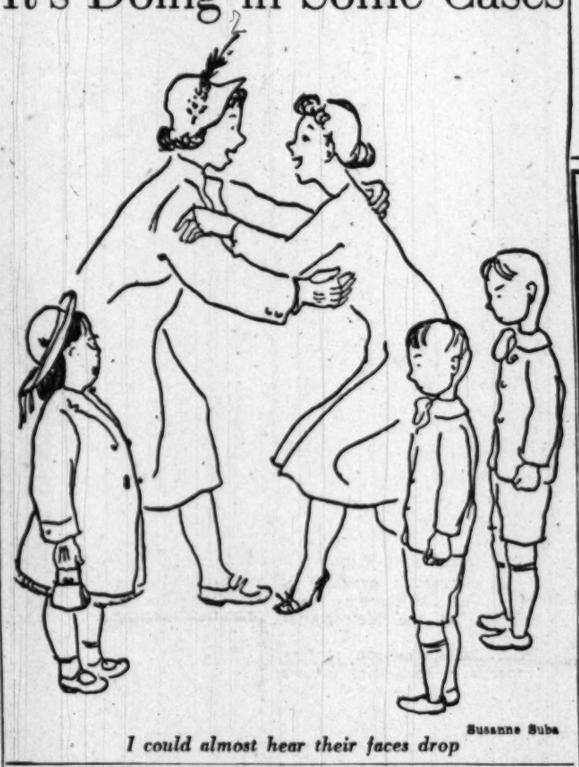
Polly accompanied her two tottering curtsies at the door with "Mother said I was to say, 'Glad to see you.'"

Polly had been pretty, very pretty, as a little girl. She would be pretty in the future when once she grew little again.

But now she had the waistline of a baked apple. A sideward look at my boys told me that they were as conscious of this as I was. I could almost hear their faces drop.

"Now, why don't you take Polly back to your room?" I suggested, already feeling the need of a cocktail.

"Sure," said my younger son. "Polly, want to see my rock collection?"



Susanne Suba

I could almost hear their faces drop

"Why?" asked Polly. Nevertheless, she followed them out.

Young Warriors Have Hunting Ground

A MAN'S house in days past may have been his castle; a boy's room still remains his confessional. It does not need the smell of tobacco or a parade of pipes to make it male. It is a happy hunting ground for the young warrior who at one moment dreams of being in the FBI and at the next of joining either the Audubon Society or the Fire or Street Cleaning Department.

It is part garage, part aquarium, part hothouse, art gallery, and shoeshine parlor. It is a Shmoo run, a Disney dump and a chemical laboratory. Women enter either at their own peril or to their guaranteed despair.

Polly was not long in discovering this.

Above our conversation in the living room, the insistent banging of both cap pistols and doors began to resound. Then a high, shrill, unmistakably feminine scream rang out, followed by the patter of frightened feet racing down the hall to the living room door.

There stood Polly, white of face, out of breath, tears splashing from her black eyes.

"Mommy!" she was crying. "They are horrid. They are shooting at me."

"Boys," cried I, "Come here this minute. What have you been doing to Polly?"

"Nothing," said the older boy. "We were just shooting at her—and she doesn't like it."

"She won't play FBI," burst out the younger one scornfully. "She doesn't like rocks. Or birds. Or fencing. Or cap pistols. Or anything."

Although Mary, my wife, and I were able to quell this first insurrection and establish a fair display of order and even of good manners, the visit was not a happy one.

Gulf Widens In Conversation

IN SPITE of all our adult efforts, the talk at luncheon did not bring Polly and the boys any closer together. If anything it widened the canyon separating them.

Polly owned no knife, and they no bracelets. Bugs did not fascinate her. Her eyes failed to brighten at the mention of bauxite, and she was utterly uninformed as to the oddities of a mandrill's posterior.

As a meeting of minds, as a fellowship of spirits, luncheon, in other words was a flop—total, thunderous, and embarrassing.

Mary, as aware of this as we were, departed with Polly almost as soon as she had gulped her demitasse.

"I'm so sorry," said she. "We will have to be going."

"Goodby!" cried Polly, while my wife and I, though echoing this to ourselves, glared our boys into silence.

IF POLLY had been the only child of our friends with whom our sons refused to become friendly, we would have blamed her or them.

We knew better, however. From their experience and our own. Again and again we have exposed them, hopefully, to our friends' children, male and female.

Sometimes it has worked, and when it does work it affords one of the most delectable of life's needed and reassuring continuities. Often, however, we in our parents' fashion have had our hopes dashed.

Slowly, sadly, painfully we have learned that the hand-me-down's in friendship are few and far far between; that friendship is self-won and self-winning, that it cannot be inherited, and must not be forced.

Had Mary written in her letter, "Geography has played a dirty trick on us in keping our families apart?"

This was before the visit. She would not write that now. She would agree with us that geography, and a lot of it, can be the surest guarantee of the continued friendship of parents since it keps their children safely apart.

Flower Show Opens Today

Mistress Mary Up-to-Date at Armory

By Dorothea Andrews

"MISTRESS MARY, quite contrary, how does your garden grow?"

In 1950, it grows in peat moss and brick borders on wooden floors under arc lights and next to houses style 1800 and houses style 1950.

At least it does at the National Guard Armory, where today at 2 p. m. the twenty-sixth National Flower Show gets underway with what is expected to be the largest flower pageant ever staged.

Certainly, as exhibits were molded into final form yesterday, the show promised to be one of the most unusual of its kind anywhere.

As you enter the huge Armory, the first impression you get is of colors—greens and reds, whites, browns, yellows. In the center, brilliant azaleas in circular pattern catch your eye. Then, with boxwood separations, you see Holland tulips in white, pink and red, hyacinths and daffodils completing a huge center floral.

Over to the left, the exhibits prepared by the Garden Section of Greater Washington balance off against each other, from the garden an 1800 log cabin would have had to gardens of today.

With each garden pattern has been furnished a typical house arrangement. The 1950 houses have picture windows, modern interiors. The 1800 log cabin has solid, plain furniture.

Yesterday, the Armory was filled with orderly confusion. Trucks bearing bricks, peat moss, shrubs, flowers and men made their way back and forth across the wooden Armory floor.

Those who were getting the show ready were still painting exhibit shelves, "planting" flowers.

The show is sponsored by the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists and by Pi Alpha Xi to keep the floral industry and the general public up to date on horti- and flori-cultural developments.

Singing Commercial Borrowed By Fairfax Women Voters

FAIRFAX County's League of Women Voters has come up with an idea it hopes will confound "the opposition"—mostly male—and help get a county manager form of government.

In a couple of weeks, if things work out, you'll be hearing singing commercials over the radio. One such, to the tune of Darktown Strutters Ball, will go like this:

Is just what Fairfax needs right now.
The one we have won't do,
It's like a poor old worn out shoe.
So register to vote.
Fairfax counts on you."

Admittedly, says Mrs. Edward A. Macy, new league president, some of the commercials can use a bit of polishing. But that's the general idea.

The league, along with several other county groups, including the Citizens' Federation, is pushing for a county manager government as the answer to Fairfax's growing pains. The county is now administered by a board of supervisors.

By mid-April, Mrs. Macy reports, petitions asking for a referendum on the question should be ready for submission to the county circuit court. Signatures of ten per cent of the county's qualified voters are required.

The league also has another unusual idea it will use to win voters—cartoons. These, announces Mrs. Omer L. Hirst, the league's action chairman, will depict, for instance, the plight taxpayers can find themselves in under the present Government.

The cartoons will be furnished to county papers. A new series every week is planned.

Miss Joanne Barrett, Frederick S. Bartlett To Wed in November

Miss Joanne Victoria Barrett, daughter of the Superintendent of Police of the District of Columbia and Mrs. Robert J. Barrett, will marry Frederick S. Bartlett early in November.

Miss Barrett, a graduate of Saint Cecelia's Academy, is a secretary at the Metropolitan Club.

Her fiance, the son of Mrs. Frederick S. Bartlett of Takoma Park, Md., and the late Mr. Bartlett, served in the United States Navy during World War II. He is associated with Charles G. Stott & Co.

Return From California

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Gassenheimer have returned to Washington after passing the winter in California.

Gen. Morgan, Gen. Bradley and General Festivity Compete

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

GEN. OMAR BRADLEY, chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Mrs. Bradley, and Gen. Sir William Morgan, retiring commander of the British Army Staff, were party competitors yesterday.

Sir William had been invited to General and Mrs. Bradley's cocktail party in honor of the representatives of member nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Instead, he was saying farewell to a group of friends at a party of his own.

Among those gathered at Fort Myer's Quarters 1, General and Mrs. Bradley's home, were Chief of Staff of the Air Force and Mrs. Hoyt Vandenberg; Chief of Staff of the Army and Mrs. Lawton Collins; Admiral Forrest Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, and Mrs. Sherman; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Arthur C. Davis, Rear Admiral and Mrs. James Foskett, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Willis D. Crittenberger, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Lyman Lemnitzer, Col. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Lieut. Col and Mrs. W. T. Bennett, Comdr. and Mrs. Mark Little, and Lieut. Col. and Mrs. C. V. Clifton.

Admiral Sir Frederick Dalrymple-Hamilton and Lady Dalrymple-Hamilton, were there and the Royal Navy's Rear Admiral Brian B. Schofield and Mrs. Schofield; Capt. R. A. Ewing and Mrs. Ewing.

Says Farewell A Second Time

GEN. SIR WILLIAM MORGAN entertained yesterday at the second in a series of cocktail parties to say farewell to friends in Washington. On Wednesday, April 5, he and his son, Capt. Christopher Morgan, are sailing for England on the Mauretania.

Yesterday's party included Gen. and Mrs. S. Le Roy Irwin, Gen. A. C. McAuliffe, Gen. and Mrs. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, Maj. Gen. S. M. Shoosmith, deputy commander of the British Army Staff, and Mrs. Shoosmith; Admiral H. B. Farncomb, Australian Naval Attache, and Mrs. Farncomb; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tuckerman; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock and Mr. and Mrs. James Black.

Unofficial Visit Still Rates Party

HERE on an unofficial visit from Korea are P. H. Shinicky, Chairman of the Korean National Assembly; his colleagues, Hoon K. Lee and Iong Gyune Ra, and Chongsun Lee, secretary general of the Assembly.

Yesterday the visitors were entertained at a cocktail party given by the Korean Ambassador, Dr. John M. Chang, who entertained about 200 guests at the embassy on Sheridan Circle.

Today Mr. Shinicky and his party will be entertained at Prospect House with Walton Butterworth, Assistant Secretary of State for Far Eastern Affairs, the host.

Pakistan Ambassador Dinner Host

THE Pakistan Ambassador and Mme. Ispahani were hosts at dinner last evening at the embassy with Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Francis Matthews and Justice and Mrs. Felix Frankfurter among their guests.

Others were Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Willard Thorp, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Raymond Hare, Representative Joseph W. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Rear Admiral and Mrs. R. H. Hillencoetter, the Rev. Edmund Walsh and Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming.

Stag Luncheon Honors Snyder

SECRETARY of the Treasury John W. Snyder was honor guest at a stag luncheon given yesterday by Thomas Krock at the United Nations Club.

Among the 29 guests were Ambassadors Felix Nieto del Rio of Chile, Augusto Dillon of Ecuador, Rafael de la Colina of Mexico, Guillermo Sevilla-Sacasa of Nicaragua, Luis Thomen of the Dominican Republic, Jeronimo Remorino of Argentina, Prince Wan Waithayakon of Thailand, Fernando Berckemeyer of Peru, Vassili Dendramis of Greece, G. C. S. Corea of Ceylon, Ricardo Martinez Vargas of Bolivia, Ramon Herbruger of Panama and Antonio Goubaud-Carrera of Guatemala.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. John Howard Staub 2d, who announce the birth of a daughter, Sharon Staub, on March 11. The baby is the granddaughter of Mrs. Charles L. Hussey of New York, formerly of Washington, and the late Admiral Hussey. Her paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Howard R. Staub of Stamford, Conn.

And to: Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Woodhams, whose second daughter, Charlene Elizabeth, was born on March 15.

Three Cheers for Reader Who Does Refinishing Job on 10-Piece Dining Room Set and Lives to Tell the Tale

THREE cheers for K. B. H., who has just completed a refinishing job on a ten-piece dining room set—plus a coffee table and several end tables—and taken the trouble to write us about it.

"As you said, it was really a job on the dining room suite," she writes, "but I am very pleased with the results. I now have a pretty walnut finish instead of the old mahogany.

"First, I used three applications of paint and varnish remover, then sanded the darker streaks. I used eight bottles of commercial wood bleach, but it still was real dark so I bought a gallon of chlorine bleach, which was much cheaper and gave good results. Then I got one quart of good walnut varnish and one-half gallon clear varnish and used three coats in all. I recovered the chair seats in a pretty shade of green with a brown stripe."

DEAR ANNE:
I would like to have the recipe for making hominy the old-fashioned way with lye. R. A., Prince Frederick, Md.

To make nice, white hominy, use white dent corn. Any clean white or yellow kernals may be used but large kernals are easiest to hull. The United States Department of Agriculture recommends the following method:

LYE HOMINY

Dissolve 5 ounces lye (sodium hydroxide or caustic soda) in 6 quarts of cold water. Stir in 5 quarts corn and let stand 15 hours. Wash thoroughly to remove the lye and the hulls. Rubbing the hominy in a cloth bag helps take off the hulls. When washing is finished, the hull and black tip should be off and the kernel should look clean. The slight discoloration which lye causes may be removed by soaking hominy overnight in water to which a little salt has been added.

Cover with water to which 5 tablespoons salt has been added. Boil in covered kettle three or four hours or until thoroughly cooked, making sure the hominy remains covered with water. Changing the water once or twice during the cooking will lessen the taste of lye. Five quarts of corn will make 15 to 20 quarts of hominy.

DEAR ANNE:
In answer to "Not-So-Bright's" query about a nail polish without high gloss, I know of a colorless polish called "Foolpruf Undercoat" put out by a leading cosmetician. It gives a hard, smooth surface with no gloss at all. Mrs. E. E. C., Bethesda, Md.

DEAR ANNE:
Can you give me a recipe for homemade clay (which is not as sticky as the modeling clay you buy) and the method for keeping it? I want to let my young "cook" use it for dough.

Mrs. E. G. Thompson
8400 Leona st. se.

Any modeling clay recipes, readers?

DEAR ANNE:
Could you please tell me how I might successfully remove dye from a pair of satin evening slippers. They were originally white and were dyed red. Then I had them dyed green, but they turned purple. Is there any way I can get the purple off so they will take a green dye?
Arlington, Va. D. C. T.

Despite your unhappy experience with these shoes-of-many-colors, I believe it would be best to re-entrust the job to a professional. I have talked to several of the better firms doing such work here (listed under "Shoes—Repairing" in the yellow telephone book), and am told they could strip some of the color from the shoes and successfully dye them a dark green. A light-green would be impossible to achieve at this stage, they say.

DEAR ANNE:
I have a large boa constrictor hide from which I would like to have a pair of shoes and a handbag (purse) made. Do you know where this might be done?
Arlington, Va. M.E.C.

A local leather expert has given me a name and address in New York where you should be able to have the shoes and bag made: Shoecraft, Inc., 603 Fifth ave., New York, N. Y. He warns that it will be rather expensive.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

'Can't Succeed if Unhappy'

Don't work too hard at your job if you want to be a success, Ida Jean Kain advised members of the Soroptimist Club yesterday.

For it isn't hard work, but a happy frame of mind that leads to success, according to Miss Kain.

Miss Kain, a syndicated columnist whose diet columns appear in The Washington Post, spoke at the club's luncheon meeting at the Willard Hotel.

She suggested that the club members—all Washington career women—avoid working too hard at the same job in hopes of being a success. If your job doesn't make you happy, it can't make you a success, she stated.

The Washington Chi Omega Alumnae Association will celebrate the founding of the fraternity at a luncheon on Saturday at the Kennedy-Warren. Miss Doris Fleeson will be guest speaker and has chosen as her subject: "Democratic Ideals and Realities."

Miss Geraldine Stowell, president of the group, will present a plaque to the most outstanding Chi Omega senior at George Washington University, and Miss Ruth Michel, president of the Active Chapter, will present a cup to the most promising pledge.

Decorating Takes Its Cue From Fashion

What colors shall I use? What designs are best? What period is this sofa?

If such questions are chasing 'round in your head, here's a series of interior decoration lectures that will answer many of them.

Miss LaVerne Neil will speak on "Decorating Takes Its Cue from Fashion" Thursday at 2:30 p. m. at W. & J. Sloane, 1217 Connecticut ave. nw. On April 13 and May 4, she will deliver two more free lectures in the same series. Miss Neil has had long experience as a decorator and styling adviser with Sloane and has traveled extensively in Europe, studying modern trends in Sweden.

Spicy Peach Bran Muffins
Beverage

SPICY PEACH BRAN MUFFINS. Ingredients—24 canned cling peach slices (about 1½ cups), 4 tablespoons firmly packed brown sugar, 1 cup bran, ¾ cup milk, 1 egg, 2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine, 1 cup sifted all-purpose flour, ¼ cup granulated sugar, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon salt.

Method: Drain peaches. Place a teaspoonful of brown sugar in bottom of each of 12 well-greased muffin pans. Top with 2 peach slices. Mix bran and milk and let stand about 5 minutes. Mix in lightly beaten egg and shortening. Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder, cinnamon and salt and add to bran. Stir only until dry ingredients are moistened. Place spoonfuls of batter over peaches in muffin pans and bake in hot (400°F.) oven 25 to 30 minutes. Invert pans to remove muffins. Makes 12 medium-sized muffins.

Rabbi Urges 'Forward-Looking Judaism' at Sisterhood Dinner

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld called for a "forward-looking American Judaism" at the convention banquet of the District No. 8 National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods at the Wardman Park Hotel last night.

Rabbi Gerstenfeld, minister of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, pointed to the warning of Rabbi Albert Gordon in his book, "Jews in Transition."

"We must recognize," he said, "that the only kind of Judaism that will be able to survive as a source of spiritual strength for the coming generation is a forward-looking American Judaism alerted to the moral challenge and speaking in terms of the noblest vision of our age."

It must be led by a prophetic ministry, he continued, with ritual secondary to ethics and with moral discipline and not creedal affirmations as the standard of religious loyalty.

"The problems of American Judaism are a result of a traditional form that was once a shield and tower of strength to our fathers," Rabbi Gerstenfeld stated, "but is utterly unsuited to the realities and the spiritual gropings of a new generation."

Highlight of the Sisterhood's afternoon session, which was held at the Wardman Park Hotel, was a talk on the parliamentarian's outlook presented by Mrs. Henry W. Roberts, jr. of Annapolis, Md., whose father-in-law authored Roberts' Rules of Order. Leadership from the personal point of view was discussed by Mrs. Ben Paul Snyder of Norfolk.

Stitch in Time Saves Money for Sundaes and Sinatra Records

IMAGINATIVE young juniors who like to design and sew their own clothes can reap benefits from entering The Washington Post Sewing Contest.

Not only will they be making garments that will serve them well this season or next fall when they re-enter school or college. But they will earn the chance to win a cash award and a weekend in New York, with all expenses paid.

Ability to create a startling, complicated outfit is not one of the requisites for entering any classification of the contest. So youngsters who are not experienced seamstresses need not hesitate to send in an entry. A simple frock, neatly executed and tastefully styled, will stand the same chance of winning a prize as the most elaborate design.

Four Divisions Open

THERE are four divisions of the contest in which there is no age-limit for entrants. First is the Junior Division, for students or nonstudents under 20 years of age. Here a date or school dress is required, and it must be made from a standard pattern.

Young entrants may also enter the following: the Glamour Group—evening, lounge, beach clothes or negligee, to be made from standard pattern or by original design; Original Design Group—dress, coat or suit; and the Children's Clothing Group—for wear by 2 to 12-year-olds.

Teen-agers, with their decided tastes in styles, can let their imagination have full play in making garments for the original design groups. Those who prefer working from a standard pattern will want to stick with the Junior Division.

Awards in Eight Classes

AWARDS will be made to the first and second prize winners in each of the eight classifications, listed in the contest entry blank printed on this page. A total of $560 will be awarded, to be divided as follows: $50 for first prizes, and $20 for second prizes. Additional awards will be eight Singer sewing dress forms, and eight Singer sewing books.

Directly following the judging the first eight prize winning garments will be sent to New York where they will be entered in the National Sewing Contest. There they will compete for honors with entries from all parts of the country.

The eight persons who clear the national judging as national-first-prize-winners have a real treat in store. They will be given a three-day holiday in New York during which they will be guests at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. A program of luncheons, dinners and theater parties will be held in their honor, climaxed with a fashion show when their garments will be modeled. In addition, each winner will receive a cash prize of $100.

A SMART young miss could make an outfit such as this her No. 1 spring project, and enter it in The Washington Post Sewing Contest while she's about it. Little jacket covers a sleeveless, side-buttoned dress. It would be equally nice in linen, silk or a metallic cotton. From Simplicity Designer's Pattern 8235

MIX-MATCH costumes are top favorite with all age-groups this year. Here is an especially gay, youthful version that permits the sewing student to give full vent to her imagination and color sense. Skirt and blouse could be in contrasting colors or of different fabrics, sash in yet another shade. Simplicity Printed Pattern 3061

NAUTICAL touch on a tailored teen-age frock is achieved with white braid piping on the collar and cuffs, and white cord belt with brass anchor attached. Fabric could be of navy cotton broadcloth or chambray, if you mean it for summer wear. Made from Simplicity Printed Pattern 3133

Mme. Brune Pulls Neat Tricks Out of Stylish Sewing Bag

PULLING some dressmaker tricks out of her sewing bag, Mme. Louise Brune gave the audience an amusing half hour yesterday when she showed her spring collection in the cocktail lounge at the Hotel Dupont Plaza.

Her 1950 version of the middy-blouse outfit was an eye-opener. It started as a yellow jersey pleated skirt and long, loose blouse with roman striped collar. Then, by the process of elimination, it became several other costumes. Minus the blouse, it was a sun dress, with strapless top of the striped jersey. Without the yellow skirt, a short striped underskirt transformed it into a tennis dress. Underneath that—a yellow lastex bathing suit.

A white shantung middy blouse outfit at first looked drab and shapeless, in a manner all too reminiscent of the '20's. But not after the model discarded the top, revealing an all-over pleated dress, sleeveless, with a deep V slash to the waistline in back.

The New York and Washington designer offered these "convertibles" in the opening part of her collection which was devoted to travel clothes. It included suits, coats, dresses and evening clothes, many of them interchangeable, permitting a maximum of outfits from a minimum of pieces.

One other novelty item was the skirt of a gray flannel suit. Its claim to fame is that it is supposedly wrinkle-proof, and it promises to come away from a long train or plane ride with a well-pressed look. Cut on the wrap-around idea, one end is allowed to hang as a side-drape. Later, it can be lapped over the underneath piece and buttoned, allowing for a straight, wrinkle-free panel at the back of the skirt.

Imported laces, organzas, silk prints and silk tweeds figured prominently in the second part of the collection when afternoon and evening gowns were shown. Models included Mrs. William P. Arnold and Miss Marilyn Himes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Himes.

This Little Violet Isn't Shrinking

TO ITS devotees, the African violet makes the whole world kin, especially that large and increasing portion whose hobby is collecting the household plant of the century.

So, Mrs. William O. Husted, president of the Metropolitan African Violet Society, looks forward to meeting fans from all parts of the land who are coming to Washington this week to see the twenty-sixth National Flower and Garden Show at the National Guard Armory. Many she will greet as warm friends, although they have never before clasped hands, for AV enthusiasts (the initials are an accepted abbreviation among collectors) form a Nation-wide fraternity with a violet-like flower as the tie that binds.

For its members, the show is an epochal event, marking the first time the Saint Paulia (botanical name for the African violet) has been accepted for exhibition in a national flower show. The Metropolitan African Violet Society, only club of its kind in the area, is staging a display worthy of the occasion. Specimen plants will be arranged to form a fan of luminous color, ranging from pale to deep blues through the orchid shades to rich purple. All the familiar varieties will be represented and rare new varieties will make their public debut. Among the newcomers will be the Blue Snow, a seedling developed in this area, and White Girl, which will be flown from California.

MRS. WILLIAM O. HUSTED
. . . AV enthusiast

Partial Preview at Home

AT THE home of Mrs. Husted, 3012 M st. se., a partial preview of the exhibit may be seen in every room in the house.

Mrs. Husted has requisitioned the recreation room in the basement as a nursery and there leaves are always in process of propagation, cradled in a peak-roofed glass propagator built by Mr. Husted, whose hobby is wood and glass work. He is constructing the arched background piece for the AV exhibit at the National Flower Show.

Since she started collecting African violets five years ago, Mrs. Husted has developed several new varieties and is always experimenting, hand pollinating her flowers in an effort to obtain unusual color and form. Like all "discoveries," new varieties are registered in their own names and that of the person who develops them, and then, Mrs. Husted says, the usual heavy flow of correspondence from fans doubles.

For the African violet is strictly a collector's item and although plants are obtainable from greenhouses, connoisseurs declare the finest and most interesting specimens are grown by individuals. Members of the Metropolitan African Violet Society will sell or exchange leaves with collectors only.

Made, Not Born

"AN AV collector is made, not born," Mrs. Husted declared. "Eight out of ten women in the metropolitan area own at least one African violet plant and don't know what to do with it."

She started in just such a haphazard way with the chance purchase of a Blue Boy. On a subsequent motor trip through Maryland and Pennsylvania, she was enraptured at the sight of African violets blooming in windows of houses she passed and she began ringing doorbells to ask for information about their care. Along the road, she aquired a Blue Girl and a Pink Beauty. Now, her husband confides, they drive a hundred miles to track down a rumored new specimen.

But the hobby is not confined to adults only. The youngest member of the Metropolitan African Violet Society is 6-year-old Lyndall Toms of 19 West Maple st., Alexandria, Va., whose mother, Mrs. Ernest H. Toms, is a charter member and chairman of the committee on selection, classification and arrangement for the exhibit at the National Flower Show. Two young sons of another member collect AVs with the same avidity with which other boys gather stamps or butterflies.

Speech Classes Have Luncheon

THE final luncheon of Mrs. Hugh Butler's Wednesday public speaking classes was held yesterday at the Wardman Park Hotel. Mrs. John R. Steelman and Mrs. Cyrus Ching were honor guests, and Mrs. Joseph Miller presided.

A silver tea tray was presented to Mrs. Butler by her class as a farewell gift. In about three weeks Colonel and Mrs. Butler are leaving for Claremont, Calif., and Mrs. Butler's classes will be taken over by Mrs. Hester Beall Provensen and Baroness von Schoen. The classes will be resumed next October 10 and 12 at the Wardman Park.

A party to introduce Mrs. Provensen will be given Monday, March 27, by Lady Rowan, and at this time a new name will be selected for the classes.

At yesterday's luncheon Mrs. Eugene John Campton was awarded a prize for being the most improved, and Mrs. Daniel Blain and Lady Rowan were voted runners-up. Mrs. W. G. Cole was voted best speaker and runners-up were Lady Rowan again and Mrs. Joseph Miller.

Club de las Americas Meet

Members of the Club de las American will be received this evening at 8:30 p. m. by the Spanish Charge d'Affaires, Don Eduardo Propper de Callejon. The reception will take place at the embassy. An address of welcome will be given by the Charge and two technicolor films will be shown.

Fortnight in Richmond

Mrs. Norman Fischer is spending a fortnight in Richmond, Va., with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Stern.

Mrs. Buxton Aiken, Margaret C. Smith Honored by DAR

Mrs. J. Buxton Aiken and Miss Margaret C. Smith were honored at a formal reception last night given by the Louisa Adams chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, at the Chapter House, 1732 Massachusetts ave. nw.

In the receiving line were Mrs. Mildred Booth, chapter regent; Mrs. David Wells, State regent; Mrs. James D. Skinner, State vice regent; Mrs. Paul Eichhorn, vice regent; Mrs. Aiken, retiring State treasurer, and Miss Smith, retiring State president of the Children of the American Revolution. Mrs. Frank E. Hickey presented guests to the receiving line.

National and State officers in the District, State committee chairmen and District chapter regents were among the 150 guests who attended.

Service Men to Attend Skating Event

Servicemen from nearby service hospitals will attend the evening sessions of the National Figure Skating Championships at Uline Arena this week at the invitation of the Board of Governors of the Washington Figure Skating Club. Transportation will be supplied by the Red Cross for 25 men for each of the three performances tonight, Friday, and Saturday.

Tip Exposes Jail Fugitive After 12 Years

Baltimore, March 22 (AP).—Freedom ended today for Michael Conco, who escaped from a Pennsylvania prison nearly 12 years ago, married and became a successful merchant here.

Conco

A Scranton, Pa., detective, acting on a tip, picked him up at his home and the 40-year-old Conco said he was ready to go.

"It's been preying on my mind. I want to pay my debt to society," he told Detective George W. Green, the same officer who arrested him in 1933 for a series of holdups.

He had served 5 years of a 7-to-14-year term when, as a trusty, he fled the Lackawana County prison at Scranton on June 4, 1938.

Police said he then came to Baltimore, changed his name to Michael Russo and built up a thriving produce stand at a public market.

Stadium Favored at Coolidge

The 16th Street Highlands Citizens Association last night adopted a resolution favoring a stadium for Coolidge Senior High School, complete with lights and swimming pool.

The group also asked the Federation of Citizens Associations "to make a study and take some action on the charity drive situation in the District."

The request was in the form of a resolution adopted at its monthly meeting in the Brightwood Demonstration School, Nicholson st., between 13th and 14th sts. nw.

Capt. Harry M. Dengler, who presided, told the group that "some action should be taken to devise a more orderly arrangement for methods of soliciting funds."

In other business, Federation President Herbert P. Leeman spoke on the Kefauver home rule bill. He said it "might not be perfect, but it's a start and can be changed."

The association also urged the abolition of the District personal property tax and backed a five day, 40-hour week for Metropolitan policemen.

Big Gross Foreseen At Sesqui

This year's Sesqui celebration events should gross $924,000 and may be augmented to bring in as much as $1,250,000.

The figures were given to the Sesqui executive committee yesterday by General Manager Paul M. Massmann.

He said 16 revenue-producing events are planned for this year and may be increased to about 30. He stressed the point that the expected receipts are gross—before deducting expenses. Biggst income will be from ticket sales to the symphonic drama planned for the new Rock Creek Park amphitheater — about $250,000.

Massmann said he hopes to find additonal uses for the amphitheater for the one night and several afternoons each week when the drama will not be presented.

The executive committee did not consider the freedom Fair, Massmann said, because a ruling from Attorney General McGrath as to the legality of a proposed new corporation to run the fair has not been received. The ruling is expected shortly.

15TH & CRITTENDEN N.W.

I am a clergyman recently transferred to New York State and since I do not expect to return to Washington, I'm obliged to offer my home here for sale so that I may buy another one where I now live. It is an attractive and substantial semidetached tapestry brick residence of 4 bedrooms—2 baths; there are 2 screened sleeping porches, and a splendid side porch on the living room. The 1st floor arrangement is particularly pleasant and spacious, with a very large center reception room that especially appealed to me when I first saw it. I purchased this home a few years ago at $22,500 and spent about $1500 more in improvements. Now I am offering it at a substantial loss to me in order to effect a quick sale. Please contact my agent, Mr. Scanland, with WAGAMAN-BRAWNER, 1700 Eye St. N.W. ME. 3860.

Prince Georges County

38 acres, 18 of which are zoned for apartments, in District Heights, Washington suburban sanitary zone. Contains valuable gravel deposits, is improved by a 6-room house. For information, apply to THEODORE F. MENK, 927 15th st. nw. EX. 2740.

500 ACRES, located in the zone of the new South Capitol St. Bridge. This bridge is now operated with a capacity of 50,000 automobiles. Also proposed to build a new bridge from Alexandria over to this neighborhood. Baltimore Blvd. is coming down in this section. The East Capitol St. Bridge is going to be built over here soon. This will make the greatest gateway to Washington of all times. If you want to see this property you don't need a salesman. Just ride to S. Capitol St. and Maryland line and look ahead 4 squares, and that's our 500 acres. Now for comparison of other gateways to Washington just follow me up the line on the Virginia end of the bridge. 6 blocks to the Bridge where the Hot Shoppe is located in the Virginia end is worth a million dollars an acre. Come up to Key Bridge, and the Virginia end there property is worth a million dollars an acre. Come to the gateway to the Memorial Bridge—a farmer bought a farm there for $3000 and gave it to his son. He sold it for $50,000. Now it's worth $2,000,000. Mr. Nevius, one of the vice presidents of the Riggs National Bank, bought 30 acres over there for $30,000 and sold it to the government by condemnation jury for $1,600,000. These illustrations will give you an idea what this 500 acres will be worth per acre. I bought this ground 20 years ago for $500 an acre expecting the bridge to be built sooner, but the Congress didn't come through with the appropriation. Where it's heading now, I think it's cheaper at $3000 than when I bought it at $500 an acre. If you are sub-dividing you can make millions. I'm in my 83d year and I'm settling my own estate, and that's the only reason I am selling.

Mint Chief Deals Blow To 7½c Coin

By the United Press

What this country needs is a good 7½-cent cigar. Yes, and a good 7½-cent coin to pay for it.

That's what a Senate Banking and Currency Subcommittee was told yesterday by Joseph Strathman, who owns a wholesale company and is president of a bank in Seneca, Kans.

The subcommittee is considering a bill that calls for both 2½- and 7½-cent coins. Strathman joined with distributors of soft drinks and milk in support of it.

But even before they had a chance to say why they wanted the coins, they heard bad news.

No Justification, She Says

Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the United States Mint, said she wouldn't give a plugged nickel for the additional coins.

She said they would be expensive to make, that every cash register in the Nation would be outmoded, and—

"No condition now exists which would justify such coins."

Mrs. Ross asked:

"How would you make change for a 3-cent stamp if you paid for it with a 7½-cent piece?"

There is an explanation, though—and pretty simple at that. Just give the purchaser of the 3-cent stamp 2 pennies and one of the proposed 2½-cent pieces.

Now if the purchaser wanted an air mail stamp, which cost 6 cents, and gave the man a 7½-cent piece.

Shall we tiptoe away and allow Mrs. R. and the Postoffice Department to work that out for themselves?

Strathman argued that the tendency now is to jump the price a nickle every time an increase is needed.

He pointed to shoestrings. "We used to get them for a nickle," he said. "Now they're 10 cents everywhere."

A 7½-cent piece, he said, would give the customer a break and make everybody happy.

Edward Walsh Mehren of Beverly Hills, Calif., chairman of the board of the American Institute for Intermediate Coinage, also was for the bill.

Gives Soft-Drink Plea

The institute, he said, is a nonprofit organization, and has a number of prominent business men backing it.

Mehren acknowledged that a 7½-cent piece would be a boom in his business. He makes a soft drink called Squirt.

According to Mehren, these are hard times in soft drinks.

The soft-drink people want to raise their prices, because, he said, if they don't they will go broke. But people don't like to fish out two coins for a drink, and the next stop above a nickel is a dime.

By the United Press

President Frank Stanton of the Columbia Broadcasting System yesterday said there isn't a "ghost of a chance" that the television industry can agree by itself on which of three competing color TV systems is best.

He told the Federal Communications Commission, which is studying the problem, that it is in a "tough spot." But he said it must decide "promptly and courageously" on one of the three systems because a composite system "just won't work."

Stanton made his statement in response to questions by Commissioner Frieda Hennock. The commission already has viewed field demonstrations by the three competing systems—Radio Corporation of America, CBS and Color Television, Inc. It has made clear it wants a system that would permit present TV set owners to receive color pictures in black-and-white.

Miss Hennock and Commissioner Robert S. Jones have questioned witnesses repeatedly on the possibility of the industry getting together on a composite system and basic color television standards.

Stanton's statement apparently dashed any such hopes.

He promised, however, that if the commission should authorize the CBS system, the network would be in a position within three months to broadcast at least 20 hours of color programs a week. He said the CBS system is the only one ready to start broadcasting immediately.

If the FCC authorizes all three systems for a trial period, Stanton said, set manufacturers opposed to color would have a "heaven-sent opportunity to sit back and do nothing."

"It is hard to avoid the conclusion that there has been something less than enthusiasm among most of the manufacturing industry either for prompt adoption of color or for CBS color," he said.

He said that if a trial period were approved for all three systems, manufacturers might merely wait until the Government finally decides which of the three is best.

Leaving the Post

A. F. Jones To Receive Army Honor

Alexander F. Jones assistant to the publisher of The Washington Post, will be presented with the Department of the Army Certificate of Appreciation by Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray during a ceremony at the Pentagon, today. The presentation will be made in Secretary Gray's office, Room 3E 718, at 11:30 a. m.

Jones is leaving Washington after 15 years' association with the Post to become executive editor of the Syracuse Herald-Journal and the Syracuse Herald-American, effective April 1.

Maj. Gen. Edward F. Witsell, the adjutant general, will read the citation. Gen. Wade H. Haislip, vice-chief of staff; Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, Army chief of information, and Philip Graham, publisher of The Post, will be among those attending.

Members of the press are invited.

The citation accompanying the award follows:

"Mr. Alexander F. Jones, for outstanding patriotic service to the Department of the Army. As one of the great news executives of the United States, Mr. Jones has made many and valuable contributions to the welfare of the Nation, especially to the Department of the Army. Through war years and in peace time he has served his newspaper and his Nation conspiciously and has been instrumental in presenting a factual and objective picture of the activities and missions of the armed services and the vital problem of adequate national defense. He has given generously of his time, his talent, and his experience in assisting the Army in meeting its public responsibilities and he has served the American public, his chosen profession, and the armed services with honor, dignity, and distinction. Mr. Jones' outstanding contributions and achievements in the established traditions of a democratic free press merits the recognition of his fellow Americans and the thanks and appreciation of the Department of the Army."

Wheat-Richer Bread Is Served at Capitol

Senators and Representatives dined yesterday on sample bread "like the kind that mother used to bake."

Representative Clifford R. Hope (R., Kans.) said 80 pounds of the bread were flown here by the Western Kansas Development Association for the Senate and House restaurants. The idea, he said, was to let Congressmen taste and enjoy a new bread with 16 percent more wheat flour.

If people would adopt it, he said, they would improve their health and at the same time boost wheat consumption.

Pope Pius XII—Priest and Statesman

Powers Reject Efforts of Ambassador of Peace

Kees Van Hoek, a native of The Hague and now an Irish citizen, has been a correspondent in London, Geneva and the United States. His first biography of Pius XII appeared in 1939. After much research and a private audience with the Pope last fall, Van Hoek has written in "Pope Pius XII, Priest and Statesman," a full and vivid description of the man and his career, from a delicate boy in Rome to supreme ruler of the Roman Catholic world. The biography is presented by The Washington Post during the present Holy Year in 24 daily installments.

By Kees Van Hoek

Foreign Affairs Writer of the Irish Times

V—Ambassador of Peace

THE Papal Embassy, or Nunciature as it is called, was housed in Munich in a large gloomy-looking house in the center of the diplomatic quarter of the Bavarian capital, the Brienner Strasse. It was austerely furnished, and even the bright crimson plush, the essence of distinction in those days, did not mitigate that austerity. This house was the frontal post in the peace campaign which Pope Benedict XV, after minute preparations, was to launch from the Vatican.

On June 13, 1917, Cardinal-Secretary of State Gasparri had inquired from the Reich Government what its peace conditions were. A fortnight later Pacelli went again to Berlin and saw the Chancellor, who told him that Germany was prepared to restore Belgium and agree to an all-round limitation of armaments. But von Bethmann-Hollweg, who had at the outbreak of the war openly regretted the "sad necessity" of the violation of Belgium, fell from power a fortnight later.

The Reichstag, however, in its resolution of July 19, pronounced itself in favor of a peace without annexation. The British Premier, Lloyd George, in his speech in Glasgow, that same month, stressed Britain's readiness for a conciliatory peace on condition of a preliminary acceptance of the restoration of Belgium.

Similar Peace Points

NEVER in any previous attempt had the two points of view come so near. The Pope now decided to concentrate all his efforts, and he instructed Pacelli to try to win the German Government for the Peace Points which he had drafted, and to which those President Wilson was to formulate more than a year later bear a marked resemblance: restoration of Belgium; return of the German colonies; limitation of armament; freedom of the seas; and an International Court of Arbitration. Two days after Pacelli's call on the Berlin Foreign Office he was informed that these proposals seemed to form an acceptable basis and would now be put before the Kaiser, who was at Vienna.

In London the heads of the Allied states were to come together for an important inter-Allied conference on August 7. That was an opportunity Cardinal Gasparri did not want to miss. He urged Pacelli to convince Berlin that there was no time to lose. Monsignor Pacelli, on wiring Berlin, was requested to stay in Munich as the Berlin Foreign Office was convinced that an agreement on the Papal Points would be reached within a week.

Kept waiting and waiting, fearing the worst, Pope Benedict XV decided to force the issue. On August 14 the Papal Envoys in all capitals handed His Holiness' Peace Note to the monarchs and presidents of the world. A supreme effort to save Europe from committing suicide, it proclaimed instead of might, "the moral of right."

Further Than League

IT was eloquent in sentiment, and in its practicability it went even further than the League of Nations which was to be born some years later, for in proposing an International Court, it pleaded for power against those who would not want to submit. In fact, it advanced suggestions with which, 20 years later, statesmen like Mr. Winston Churchill and Lord Davies tried to rescue the Geneva institution from its utter inertia.

The Papal Note further pleaded for an all-round renunciation of damages and a limitation of armaments; this, the practical Pope argued, would in its relief of the national budgets soon make good each nation's war losses.

The Pope's plan was a grand plan—and a most sensible one. Had it been accepted, the peoples of Europe would have been spared much of the agony which they have gone through since. There were, of course, serious drawbacks. France felt that this plan might cost her the rewinning of Alsace-Lorraine, on which she had set her mind since 1871, and that, too, at a moment when the French trenches were being reinforced by increasing contingents of fresh American troops. England, through her Minister to the Holy See, Count de Salis, explained to Cardinal Gasparri that an unequivocal German declaration that she would restore Belgium and indemnify her for the terrible losses inflicted upon an innocent people, was the conditio sine qua non of any proposal which the British Government was prepared to entertain.

Peace Action Doomed

THERE were petty objections, however, which doomed the Papal peace action which had galvanized millions of tortured minds and bodies back into hope. In the Treaty of London, by which the Allied Powers had won over Italy, formerly the Confederate of Germany and Austria, a secret clause had been inserted at the insistence of the then professedly anti-clerical Government of Italy, promising them that the Allied Powers would not admit any Papal conciliation.

But worse was a similar objection working on the German side, here, von Bethmann-Hollweg had been succeeded as Chancellor by Dr. Michaelis, a pedantic Prussian official and a sectarian fanatic who hated to see a Papal effort succeed. In vain Nuncio Pacelli pleaded with him, that:

"If a clear and unequivocal assurance can be given on Belgium, the crucial point, a peace honorable to all is assured and Your Excellency's name will be immortal."

A courteous note followed which, in modern parlance, instead of slamming any doors left them all open. Cardinal Gasparri scanned it and summed it up in one of those characteristic words of his:

"Worthless!"

Today it makes sorry reading, this game of bluff and of intermittent delays, played by the diplomats whilst the youth of Europe and America was bleeding to death in the mud of Flanders, on the plains of Russia, on Balkan mountain ranges and along Italian river valleys. That evening when the last German note was received, a German friend came to see the Nuncio. They sat long after dusk in the silent unlit study at the Brienner Strasse. Pacelli could hardly control his deep emotion.

"Everything is lost," he sighed, then, prophetically, "your poor country, too." . . .

Henceforward he occupied himself chiefly with the organization of relief of human distress, so rampant in Central Europe, from the starving children in the blockaded Reich to the caged-up Allied prisoners of war over whose well-being he watched incessantly.

Cumberland Elects Post for Fourth Term

Cumberland, Md., March 22 (AP)—Mayor Thomas S. Post was returned to office for the fourth consecutive time as complete returns early today gave him 8611 votes to 2259 for George A. Trost.

But it was a different matter with the council. Only one incumbent—William H. Buchholtz—was reelected. The three other councilmen, all in the race, were defeated in what was classed as a major upset in local politics. The council now shapes up with George H. Tederick, Mrs. Lucile W. Roeder, John J. Long and Buchholtz.

Be Generous

If we complain about our lot . . . Just let us think today . . . About the crippled boys and girls . . . Who cannot run and play . . . The ones who sit in wheelchairs or . . . Who have to lie in bed . . . And wonder by what method they . . . May earn their daily bread . . . Who can not live the fullest life . . . With bodies strong and well . . . Including all the sports where they . . . Might otherwise excel . . . Then let us all be generous . . . And buy the sunshine stamps . . . For hospital facilities . . . And medicine and camps . . . The Easter Seals that means so much . . . For children everywhere . . . Whose little limbs are crippled and . . . Who need our special care.

Kidding Kids Give Ball A Pain—But He Ain't Aiken

If you are an average reader, you have glanced at the two pictures before starting to read the text. So you already know that Senator George Aiken and Post

John Ball Senator Aiken

Reporter John Ball look a good bit alike.

But a group of youngsters from Asbury Park, N. J., didn't know it when their school bus pulled up alongside Reporter Ball's car the other day, as John was trying to back into a parking space on Capitol Hill.

The more John huffed and puffed, the more the kids razzed him. It was mostly good-natured, but what childish insults lack in venom they more than make up for in enthusiasm. So our boy John got a pretty good roasting.

Parking his car, he dismissed the incident from his mind and went along to cover a session of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

In a little while, in trouped the children whom John had seen in the bus.

As they filed in, Chairman Elmer Thomas interrupted the committee's work to greet the visitors. Then he introduced his colleagues around the table.

As he called the name of the ranking Republican and Senator Aiken rose to acknowledge it, Reporter Ball heard one of the lads in the back of the room whisper hoarsely:

"Stand in front of me, Eddie. Hide me. That Senator Aiken is the guy I was givin' the razzberry to in the parking lot."

ALL ABOARD!

On reading that 100 reservations had already been filed for rocket trips to other worlds, Smith Dawless of 1233 13th st. nw., found his typewriter tapping out:

"Sun Valley and Miami Beach . . . No longer lure the nouveau riche . . . For now the smart vacation place . . . Is up in interstellar space . . . The swanky international set . . . Will plane to Saturn, via jet . . . On nonstop rockets through the blue . . . They'll hop to Venus for the view.

"The winter season soon will be . . . On fashionable Mercury . . . While Christmas shoppers haunt bazaars . . . Along the purple streets of Mars . . . But no escape could be much worse . . . Than trekking 'round the universe . . . For, home-bound from the Milky Way . . . One might find Earth H-bombed away."

ON BEING A PUBLIC SERVANT

On the 13½ st. side of the District Building is a "No Parking" zone which is used during business hours as a reserved parking area for official cars.

In the rear of the building are about two dozen parking spaces which are legally reserved for official cars. Another area is set aside for the loading and unloading of trucks.

So what happens this Tuesday afternoon? A scout car from No. 1 Precinct ignores all the reserved parking places, drives up to the 14th st. entrance and parks there, alongside the loading platform.

One policeman gets out of the cruiser and enters the District Building; the other waits in the car, completely oblivious to the bottleneck he is creating on busy 14th st.

When the first cop finally returns, the scout car drives off and traffic resumes its normal pattern. But once again the question presents itself:

"Is this the type of example our public officials are supposed to set for us?"

GIVE-AWAYS

"Apartment-sized piano with one bad note, free for the hauling to any worthwhile organization." (Metropolitan 0279.)

"Charming, healthy 7-week-old kittens." (Atlantic 6153.)

"Five female puppies, 1 month old, mixture of police and collie." (Union 2212, evenings.)

PERSONAL NOTES

Genevieve Muldoon, 4438 Davenport st. nw.: Good eye, and thanks. The Muldoons were indeed listed on the map, in County Fermanagh, so our editors needn't have apologized for leaving them out.

Gertrude Harrigan, 1468 Harvard st. nw.: Having had no hand in the drawing of the map, I'm not the least bit perturbed by your low opinion of it. However I might point out that, as Irish names go, 100 years is not a long time. It may be that the man who drew the map considered the Harrigans Johnny-come-latelies, and left them out for that reason.

ADD DEFINITIONS

Bruce R. Morris of Amherst, Mass., writes:

"Spring is the season of the year when the iron in a man's blood turns to lead in his feet."

Civilian Flying Controls Seen In Atom Areas

Private pilots will eventually be required to get Civil Aeronautics Administration clearance to fly through perimeter defense areas and around atomic plants, D. W. Rentzel, CAA chief, said yesterday.

The areas will include the East Coast, the West Coast, the Canadian border, and "islands" around the Oak Ridge (Tenn.), Hanford (Wash.) and Los Alamos (N. Mex.) atomic energy plants, he said.

Currently, the East Coast shoreline down to Norfolk and the Los Alamos area are active defense areas in being.

Private pilots, Rentzel said, are at present being "encouraged" to file a flight plan if they contemplate flying more than 20 miles off the East Coast anywhere from the Canadian border down to Norfolk or above 4000 feet over the Los Alamos "island." Flights directly over atomic plants have been previously banned.

Clearances are now not mandatory for private pilots flying in contact weather. Rentzel said the "encouragement" policy will extend over the other defense areas as they become active and will eventually change to a mandatory policy.

Flight plans in those areas, he explained are necessary to provide aircraft identification data for air defense units charged with protecting the areas.

Rentzel emphasized that the CAA does not contemplate mandatory filing of flight plans all over the country. He said the affected areas will be only a small part of the Nation's total area.

Kerr Makes New Move for Oil

By Drew Pearson

Bible-quoting Bob Kerr of Oklahoma is really rolling up the bulwarks to protect his oil and gas interests.

Robert Kerr

Senator Kerr's oil and gas lands are valued at approximately 100 million dollars and his gross income is about 14 million dollars. The net income from his Kerr-McGee Co. last year was $1,218,627, on which the company paid only $6949 in taxes. His preferred stock earned $22.63 a share and his common stock $1.40—all of which isn't bad for a Senator.

However, the gentleman from Oklahoma is not content with these lush profits and low taxes. He has already put his brother, Aubrey Kerr, on the Federal payroll with the RFC. He has been lobbying ceaselessly to pass the Kerr bill, which would increase the price of natural gas to almost every Northern city—and also increase his own dividends.

But on top of all this, the Senator now wants to appoint a Federal judge who for years has been in the pay of the oil companies, and who—human nature being what it is—might find his rulings from the bench leaning toward his old clients.

The proposed judge is popular W. R. (Bob) Wallace of Oklahoma City, long-time attorney for the Magnolia Oil Co., a subsidiary of the giant Socony-Vacuum. Wallace has wandered back and forth between the Republican and Democratic Parties, but has always been as good a friend to Bob Kerr as he has been to the oil companies. In fact, he has been counsel for Magnolia Oil for so long—a quarter of a century—that he is due to draw a fat pension.

Thus he might be in the highly prejudicial position of being paid by Socony-Vacuum at the same time he drew a salary from Uncle Sam for supposedly impartial rulings from the bench.

Wallace is now 65 years old—five years above the age limit usually set for Federal judges. But Senator Kerr is pushing him vigorously just the same. And Bible-quoting Bob contributed so heavily to the Truman campaign fund—as did other oil interests—that Wallace's appointment is almost certain.

Note: The present policy of the Justice Department, unlike Roosevelt's, is to appoint any judge recommended by the Democratic Senator in the Senator's State, no matter what the judge's background.

Three Former Kings

The Duke and Duchess of Windsor are telling friends about the great kick they got out of attending the New Orleans Mardi Gras recently. Among other things they dined with Lester Alexander and Dr. Alton Ochsner, both former kings of the Mardi Gras.

As the guests sat down, the lady who was responsible for the King of England's renunciation of his throne looked around the table and inquired of her host: "Tell me a little more about your guests."

"Dr. Ochsner," she was told, "is the famed cancer specialist. And both he and Mr. Alexander are former rexes of Mardi Gras."

"I am glad," replied the duchess, "to be dining with three ex-kings."

Friendship Dividends

"Harry Boot from The Hague was a very happy boy. This morning he did not know what to say. The burgomaster of Rotterdam gave him a real scooter. That's for you, he said, but even then Harry could not believe it."

So wrote the Het Vrije Volk of Amsterdam after the arrival of the American Legion's Tide of Toys in Holland on the U. S. Lines' American Defender. The newspaper, and scores of others in Holland went on to describe the distribution of the toys by CARE, and the manner in which children all over the U. S. A. worked with the American Legion to collect them.

Only sour grapes expressed abroad, as was expected, was by the Communist press. Even the couldn't entirely damn the tide of toys.

"The cynic will say that America sees very well that the country which influences the youth of a nation also possesses the future," wrote De Waarheid. "But one can't neglect the warmth and cordiality, the spontaneity and devotion of thousands and thousands of American children who don't know about communism and the Marshall Plan."

CARE has been doing its usual expert job of distribution, while the American Legion, thanks to American overseas airlines, has sent four representatives to various countries to explain the message behind the belated Christmas gift.

ORCHIDS AGAIN . . . tomorrow and Saturday, we'll have orchids for all of you. This is our 75th Anniversary down at Center Market City and we're celebrating it by passing on orchids to you—our good customers.

Although we're celebrating 75 years of history and good food down at Center Market City, it's really an excuse to give orchids to all of you who missed them last time. This time we had plenty flown in from Hawaii, so you won't miss out. Just bring this column down with you, go to the manager's office at the rear of the Market, and ask for yours.

HOPE YOU enjoy them as much as we enjoy presenting them to you!

EVER SO OFTEN we like to pass on our prize recipes. Here's one we thought you might like to have for your files. It's a favorite of ours:

Mashed banana furnishes part of the liquid and good flavor in these "Raisin Banana Muffins." The raisin-banana combination is especially effective in these tender buttermilk muffins that will dress up your plainest menu in a hurry.

RAISIN BANANA MUFFINS

1 cup seedless raisins
1 egg
½ cup mashed banana
½ cup sour milk or buttermilk
¼ cup melted shortening
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1/3 cup granulated sugar
3 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt

Rinse and drain raisins. Beat egg and add banana, milk, shortening and raisins. Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder, soda and salt, and add to first mixture all at once, stirring only until moistened. Fill greased muffin pans 2/3 full. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) 20 to 25 minutes. Serve hot.

Makes 12 to 15 medium-sized muffins.
